INVESTIGATION OF KIDNAPING BRINGS DISCOURAGEMENTS

Three Leads Prove
Fruitless; Search
For Servants

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 17.—State police today reported new discouragement and the blasting of what had seemed three promising leads to the kidnaping of little Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.

The forenoon bulletin to the press was entirely negative. Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, from the Lindbergh home, tersely acknowledged the failure of three more of the scant stock of leads which police have unearthed in their investigation of the kidnaping.

C. Leandro Lightfoot of Franklin Park, N. J., reported that he had found the chisel which had been missing from his tool chest and which police thought might have been used by the kidnapers. Col. Schwarzkopf, while not definitely abandoning the evidence offered by Lightfoot, indicated he did not consider this lead of great importance.

Lightfoot had reported his two German servants disappeared the night of the kidnaping under peculiar circumstances.

The hope that the baby held in Preston, Ia., might be the missing Lindbergh baby, was definitely disproven by Col. Schwarzkopf. He said the Lindberghs had received telegraphic descriptions of the Preston baby and it had birthmarks which the Lindbergh baby did not have.

Three nurses instead of two, as generally believed, attended the kidnaped baby, it was revealed as search continued for another family's two servants who suddenly left their jobs in Franklin Park the day after the crime.

The name of the third nurse, until now not mentioned in reports on the investigation, is Miss Annette Copin, Union City, N. J. Police declined to say where Miss Copin is, but said she had been questioned.

The two nurses who have figured in first reports of the investigation are Betty Gow, now living at the Lindbergh home, and Miss Marie Cummings, of New York, who attended Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh and the baby when Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was born twenty months ago.

Other developments or reports in the investigation were believed to be of minor importance. They included the collapse of several clues, and another report of what may have been kidnappers, as made by Miss Teresa Dercl, a former stenographer.

Miss Dercl, formerly of New York, now of Wertsville near here, has repeated her story twice to police who believe it may be of some importance.

Late February 23, she said, she walked along Wertsville road when a blue sedan with three men as passengers stopped and one of the men inquired directions to the Lindbergh home.

"I pointed out the direction, and went my way. Two of the men were swarthy, the other was a blond," she said. "The blond was in the back seat." She believed she would know the men were she to see them again, and she was to look over rogue's gallery pictures.

FARMERS CARRYING LAST YEAR'S GRAIN INTO NEW HARVEST

Amount In Bins In Ohio
Large Says Farm
Expert

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 17.—In the bins of Ohio farmers this year was a March 1 supply of grain approximately three times greater than a year ago, according to a statement made here today by C. W. Eberhard, head of the grain department of the Ohio Farm Bureau.

Wheat stocks were estimated at 17,000,000 bushels, compared with 6,500,000 last year, and corn at 78,000,000 bushels as compared with last year's 25,000,000.

Eberhard told the situation to three things—larger crops, lower prices and lighter feeding because of the open winter.

Many farmers have sold their grain only when need for money arose. Unless prices improve materially, Eberhard believes a high percentage of the year's crop will be carried into the new harvest.

Experts have been encouraged by an estimated increase of 32,000,000 bushels this year in the amount of wheat fed to stock.

Little encouragement was seen for a higher corn price until the size of the new crop is determined. In the United States there were about 400,000,000 bushels more on March 1 than a year ago or a total stock of 1,103,000,000.

Claim Nazis Planned
Violence To Gain Control

BERLIN, March 17.—Prussian police raided Fascist headquarters and branches today on information alleging that the Nazis planned to mobilize their storm battalions for civil war.

An official Prussian government statement said the raids were intended to frustrate Fascist preparations to grasp power by violence.

The raids were made through all Prussia by the efficient Prussian police force. The Nazis had hoped to control that police force by winning control of the Prussian Diet in the April 24 elections.

The search was ordered by the Prussian ministry of the interior. Defeat of the Nazi leader, Adolf Hitler, in the presidential election, and rumors of an attempted Fascist coup published abroad, preceded the raids.

Hitler was defeated Sunday by President Paul von Hindenburg in a sensational election, with the veteran soldier-statesman piling up a record vote but not a clear majority.

The Paris newspaper Le Matin today published what was purported to be a circular distributed secretly from Hitler's headquarters at Munich, before the presidential election. The circular outlined plans to seize power in Germany by force if Hitler was beaten for the presidency.

The final or no-vote election had been set for April 10 with von Hindenburg and Hitler the contestants. According to the alleged Nazi plans published by Le Matin, the Fascists had a force of 520,000 "storm troops." They were ready to be moved to any part of Germany.

The Nazi heavy transport corps was instructed to maintain wagons and trucks in good condition, "ready for action."

The Prussian government's communication concerning today's raids referred to the brown shirts "preparations and armaments for civil war which may not be explained by the pretext of anticipating Communist disorders."

The communication said the Nazis were guilty of "frivolously playing with fire which the Prussian government will no longer tolerate. Prussia is not willing to permit the equipment of an army not only resigned to undermine governmental authority but also a constant element of unrest."

The Prussian government announced that police in recent raids in Berlin had found Nazi plans for mobilization of semi-military units in Prussia for the purpose of encircling Berlin.

It also was alleged that the Hitlerites had made arrangements for provisions, transportation, and armament for the Nazi storm detachments.

Le Matin charged that men trained to handle machine guns would join the Nazi general staff and regional groups immediately. The newspaper alleged that the Nazis were ready to have an important military force in any part of Germany within forty-eight hours.

The Paris newspaper quoted the alleged secret orders as stating: "In the event that Hitler is not elected, chiefs of the storm sections shall order their men to remain tranquil and avoid provoking members of the opposition parties. During the lower, if the legal method is impossible, force will be employed."

Three actresses prominent on stage or screen were married Wednesday. Roszika Dolly of the famous Dolly Sisters team was married to Irving Nether, son of the Chicago department store owner, by Mayor Jimmie Walker in New York.

Joan Bennett of the famous Bennett screen stars, married Gene Markey, stage and screen writer in Los Angeles. Betty Bronson of the films married Ludwig Lauerhaus of Asheville, N. C., in Santa Barbara.

APPEAL OF MURDER
VERDICT IS DENIED

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—Conviction of Blanche B. Halsey, 67, Bowling Green, O., on a charge of second degree murder, was affirmed today by the state supreme court.

An application for review of a judgment by the appeals court of Wood County was rejected.

Mrs. Halsey is an inmate of the state reformatory for women at Marysville, O. She was sentenced in connection with the death of her brother, Fred Bonham, in Bowling Green on September 4, 1931.

Hunter Tells How He Found Lost Explorer

(Note: Stephen Rattin, Swiss big game hunter and trapper, with fourteen years experience in the jungle of South Africa, has just returned to civilization with a sensational report that he had found Col. H. P. Fawcett, a famous explorer, had been lost in the "great jungle" seven years, since he started out to find a "lost civilization." Rattin's story, obtained by C. A. Powell, and signed by Rattin for Powell, follows):

SAO PAULO, Brazil, March 17.—Englishman!

That one word, whispered falteringly by a white man garbed in animal skins and held captive by Indians in an inland jungle village gave me the first hope that I had found Col. H. P. Fawcett.

Col. Fawcett had been missing for seven years since he entered the jungles with several others to seek a "lost civilization."

And that one word, coming as it did, was enough to hold me in the village ten more days to get another chance to talk to the white captive whose face had been darkened by long experience in the jungle. An Indian headman prevented more talk at our first meeting.

I went into the northern jungles of the state of Mato Grosso (great jungle) last October to secure Indians for a hunting and trapping expedition and reached the settlement of Cacique (headman) Macmiamque of the Muricigalos tribe.

When I was talking with the Cacique I noticed a white man, tall in stature but rather heavy, with white hair and a beard, apparently about 65 years old. He did not approach me although he scrutinized me closely. Later I asked him if he spoke Portuguese and he whispered the one word falteringly:

"Englishman."

The headman intervened and ended the conversation immediately, ordering the white man away. But my curiosity was aroused. I remained at the village for ten days determined to solve the mystery if possible and win the confidence of the Indians so they would allow me to talk with the white man.

I got an opportunity to talk with him after four days. He told me he was Col. Fawcett and asked me to communicate with any British consulate and with a "farmer named Paget."

This was all the information I could get except that he had been

EFFORTS FOR TRUCE CONFUSED BY THREE POINT PEACE PLAN

Submission Of Program
Delays Consideration
In Shanghai

SHANGHAI, March 17.—Efforts to establish a complete truce between Chinese and Japanese forces in the Shanghai area were delayed and confused today after submission of a three point program to the Nanking and Tokio governments.

Nanking was annoyed by alteration of the original program when it was submitted to Tokio. The Japanese position was not determined. Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu said "telegraphic obstruction" delayed expression of his government's attitude.

A meeting scheduled between Shigemitsu and Quo Tai-Chi, of the Chinese foreign office, was postponed awaiting the Japanese reply. The two representatives had a meeting with British Minister Sir Miles Lampson and drawn up a draft program of the following three points which were submitted to Nanking and Tokio:

Chinese troops were to hold their present position, not advancing to the international settlement; Japanese troops were to be withdrawn within a few days to the boundaries, due to their large number, until they could be placed inside; a joint commission with neutral observers was to certify the mutual withdrawal, with the present Chinese positions west of Shanghai to be construed as withdrawal from their original placements.

The arrangement was provided that the arrangement applied only to the present situation.

CREW SAVED AS VESSEL BURNS

NORFOLK, Va., March 17.—The master and crew of the fishing schooner Ruth Mildred were brought safely ashore today from their craft which caught fire and burned to the water's edge last night.

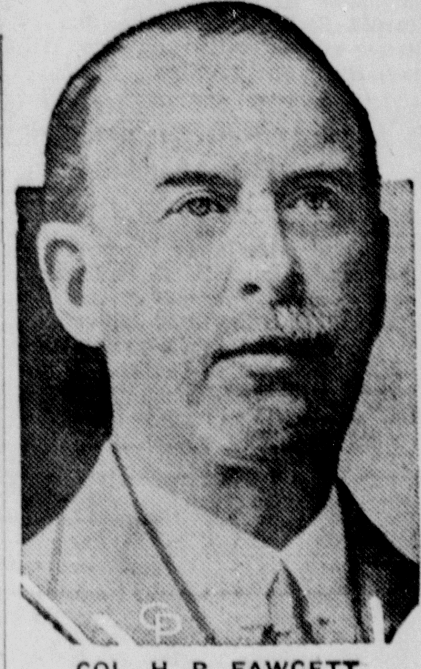

Other vessels from the fishing fleet operating out of Hampton, Va., went to the Ruth Mildred's assistance immediately after the fire broke out. Half an hour after the fire began, the master of the Ruth Mildred and her crew of five were taken aboard the schooner Ariel which came into port this morning.

TACKS ARE FATAL

READING, Pa., March 17.—An operation which removed 200 tacks from his stomach proved fatal to Jacob Rheinheimer, 77-year-old shoemaker, who had made a practice all his life of holding tacks in his mouth while mending shoes.

When he became ill and was operated on a week ago, Rheinheimer admitted he had swallowed a tack occasionally. Physicians found the lining of his stomach pierced with 200 of the sharp-pointed brads.

GOVERNOR REVEALS NEW LIBERAL STAND AT DRY CONFERENCE

Barely Audible Hisses
Greet Speech To
W. C. T. U.

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—A bare suggestion of hisses and a chorus of undertone "noes" greeted a statement of prohibition views by Governor George White last night during a regional meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union here.

The governor, a Democratic candidate for the nomination for president of the United States, told the women they were making a mistake in opposing a referendum on the eighteenth amendment. "The question should be resubmitted to the people," said the governor. "If for no other reason than to refute charges of the wet that the measure was pushed through when soldiers were overseas during the World War."

The governor's unexpected statement caused a small flurry. Previously, during a two-day meeting, two dry candidates had been endorsed and resolutions had been passed voicing opposition to resubmission.

Following his brief address, Governor White said:

"Prohibition has not met with expectations of the people. It is the right of my record to at least make these suggestions for your careful consideration."

Two candidates, Attorney General Gilbert Bettman, Republican aspirant to membership in the United States senate, and Ohio Supreme Court Judge Florence E. Allen, who seeks election to congress, were apparently disapproved by the women for their liberal views toward prohibition.

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—Thomas H. Wick, attorney of Dayton, late Wednesday filed a formal protest of the candidacy for the Republican nomination of Charles A. Bracher, of Dayton. The protest, filed with the secretary of state, alleged that Bracher had not complied fully with provisions of Ohio law in filing his declaration of candidacy. It asked that Bracher's name be withdrawn and not be printed on the ballot.

DETROIT, March 17.—Search for two school girls, who vanished from homes of their wealthy parents after saving their lunch money "to see the world," today extended into three states.

Detroit authorities notified police in New York and Chicago to look for the girls, Joan McPherson, 13, daughter of John P. McPherson, Assistant Attorney General of Michigan, and Margaret Menzel, 12, daughter of Stephen Menzel, an executive of the Graham-Paige motor company.

The two adventurers left the Menzel home Tuesday night in the Menzels' expensive automobile. Their parents found a note, which since "Don't worry. We'll be back—sometime." Class-mates at Gross Pointe School told authorities the girls had been planning a trip to New York or Chicago for several weeks. They had saved $10 each from their school lunch money, the other students said.

STOIC INDIANS SIT WHILE COURT TRIES FELLOW TRIBESMAN

Await White Man's
Justice In Murder
Case

GLOBE, Ariz., March 17.—Fat, blanketed Indian squaws, and wooden faced Apache braves, squat on their heels outside the little court room here waiting for the white man's justice they little comprehend to decide the fate of Goiny Seymour, their tribesman.

Seymour is accused of the murder of Henrietta Schmeier, Columbia University co-ed who paid with her life for an attempt to learn the customs of the Indians.

The squaws, many with tiny squalling paposes strapped to their backs, stolidly weave strange designs into grass and reed baskets, as they wait. The bucks sit, chewing endless wads of tobacco, or puffing slowly on cheap cigars.

They wonder at the stir over a simple killing. An Indian tribunal of headmen only a generation or so ago quickly would have settled the case. They would have found Seymour guilty and stoned him to death, or freed him of blame, a day or so after the crime.

Inside the courtroom another Apache, Robert Gatewood, had violated traditions of the close-mouthed, tribe, by telling a story that may hang Seymour.

Gatewood, 19, range rider, told of seeing Seymour standing at a basin, washing from his hands what appeared to be blood.

Seymour paled and bowed his head as Gatewood described the meeting.

"What have you been doing?" Gatewood said he asked.

"Seymour said: 'I've killed the white woman.'"

"I asked him: 'Where?'"

"He said: 'I don't know; down below somewhere. I was with the white woman. I married her. She said she'd tell I killed her. That's why. Don't tell on me, Robert.'"

Gatewood said the next day he saw Seymour again, and asked if he remembered what he had told him the night before.

"He answered 'yes.' He said he'd kill me, too, if I told."

Gatewood's sister, a plump, placid girl, mother of Seymour's two children, sat passively in a front row chair, her feelings well concealed.

Miss Schmeier came to the White River reservation last June to study Apache life. She was not seen alive after she rode off with Seymour toward a native dance neither ever reached.

STRIKERS CHECKED BY AUTHORITIES IN GATHERING AT MINE

Officers Use Tear Gas
To Repulse
Attackers

ATHENS, O., March 17.—A crowd of approximately 1,300 striking miners which gathered near the Black Diamond mine, operated by the Black Diamond Coal Co., of Columbus, at Lathrop, near here, was fought back with tear gas bombs by Sheriff Wayne Wingett, his deputies and Ohio National Guard officers today.

The Black Diamond mine resumed operation yesterday when fifty-six men returned to work. It was the first mine opened since the strike began February 1.

Today's demonstration occurred about 2:30 a. m. when the strikers, who had gathered from throughout the Hocking Valley district, attempted to cross a bridge leading into the mining village of Lathrop. Wingett and the guardsmen urged the strikers to turn back. They refused. The officers tossed tear gas bombs into the crowd.

The superintendent said he would have a conference with officers of the coal company at Columbus who would advise Col. John Sheller, Ohio state National Guard observer in this district, by Saturday whether attempts will be made to continue operation of the mine.

Following today's demonstration, Wingett and Bolin declared that if the mines are going to continue to attempt to operate throughout the Hocking Valley, they would have to help to maintain order from other and outside sources.

A report of this morning's disorder was made by Major John A. Blount, of Hillsboro to Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, at Columbus. He said quiet prevailed in the valley after the mine crowd was dispersed.

WHITE COMMUTES SENTENCE OF MAN

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—The sentence of Lewis Johns, Jr., of Zanesville, scheduled to die in the electric chair at Ohio Penitentiary Friday night, was commuted to life imprisonment today by Gov. George White.

Johns was convicted of the slaying of Henry H. Gay, Civil War veteran of Cannelville.

The governor's decision was made upon recommendation of S. P. Dunkle, his executive secretary, and the Ohio board of parole.

Dunkle had investigated the case since receiving the confession of William Gibbons, also of Zanesville, absolving Johns of the actual slaying of Gay, which took place during the preparation of a robbery on March 7, 1931.

AGREES ON SESSION TO PROVIDE RELIEF SOUGHT BY CITIES

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—The general assembly of Ohio will be called into extraordinary session March 29 for enactment of relief legislation.

Governor George White today announced he had decided to recall the legislators for a single purpose — to assist Ohio communities unable to meet their own unemployment and poor relief needs.

The formal call will be issued either Friday or Saturday, the governor said. Members of the legislature will be recalled through their sergeant-at-arms.

The governor explained the session would be delayed until March 29 because of the Easter holidays.

Shortly after the general assembly convenes, the chief executive will appear before the joint session of the two houses to deliver his executive message.

In an informal statement the governor said his previously announced plan for relief legislation would not be changed materially.

He was convinced, he said, "that a vast majority of Ohio communities could, by sacrifice and coordination of all efforts, meet their relief problems."

"However, in large cities," the executive continued, "There is incontestable evidence that means at their disposal are far below those necessary to meet relief demands for the year."

"The state has set an example in cutting expenses; many counties and cities have followed this example, or are doing so, but their efforts, supplemented by contributions to charitable relief funds, are insufficient."

"The state of Ohio must not be charged with permitting any of its citizens to starve."

"I have, therefore, decided to call the general assembly."

"I will submit to it a plan which already has been made public in outline."

Major provisions of the plan are an additional one per cent excise tax on gross earnings of public utilities, excluding transportation companies, but including intrastate pullman transportation, and a proposal which would enable local government subdivisions to use their portion of the gasoline and automobile license tag funds for a limited period, provided such use was deemed necessary.

The additional utility tax would be allocated to the various counties for purpose of retiring relief bonds, over a period of five years.

Before taxing authorities of the counties could take advantage of the proposed act, it would be necessary for the state tax commission and the state director of welfare to approve issuance of the bonds after determination of the need for relief.

It was estimated that $11,000,000 of bonds could be issued under terms of this proposal in a 30-day period. The yearly collection was estimated at $2,200,000.

A total of approximately $9,000,000, the governor believes could be made available to counties, cities, townships and villages, from diverse sources.

NEW HYMIE MARTIN TRIAL IS APPEALED

CLEVELAND, O., March 17.—Prosecutor P. L. A. Lieghley today appealed to the Ohio Supreme Court to set aside an appellate court decision ordering a new trial for Hyman Martin, under sentence of life imprisonment in connection with the murder of former Councilman William E. Patterson.

The state supreme court today received a brief of sixty-three pages, mailed by Lieghley yesterday, in which he described the ruling of the court of appeals at Lima as "unusual."

Oral arguments to the supreme court are to be made, but probably not before the middle of next month, in the opinion of court observers.

Col. Fawcett had been missing for seven years since he entered the jungles with several others to seek a "lost civilization."

And that one word, coming as it did, was enough to hold me in that village ten more days to get another chance to talk to the white captive whose face had been darkened by long experience in the jungle. An Indian headman prevented more talk at our first meeting.

I went into the northern jungles of the state of Mato Grosso (great jungle) last October to secure Indians for a hunting and trapping expedition and reached the settlement of Cacique (headman) Macmameque of the Muricagalo tribe.

When I was talking with the Cacique I noticed a white man, tall in stature but rather heavy, with white hair and a beard, apparently about 65 years old. He did not approach me although he watched me closely. Later I asked him if he spoke Portuguese.

EFFORTS FOR TRUCE CONFUSED BY THREE POINT PEACE PLAN

Submission Of Program Delays Consideration In Shanghai

SHANGHAI, March 17.—Efforts to establish a complete truce between Chinese and Japanese forces in the Shanghai area were delayed and confused today after submission of a three point program to the Nanking and Tokio governments.

Nanking was annoyed by alteration of the original program when it was submitted to Tokio. The Japanese position was not determined. Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu said "telegraphic obstruction" delayed expression of his government's attitude.

A meeting scheduled between Shigemitsu and Quai-Tai-Chi, of the Chinese foreign office, was postponed awaiting the Japanese reply. The two representatives met with British Minister Sir Miles Lampson and drawn up a draft program of the following three points which were submitted to Nanking and Tokio:

Chinese troops were to hold their present position, not advancing to the international settlement; Japanese troops were to be withdrawn within the settlement providing that they be left outside the boundaries, due to their large number, until they could be placed inside; a joint commission with neutral observers was to certify the mutual withdrawal, with the present Chinese positions west of Shanghai to be construed as withdrawal from their original placements. It was provided that the arrangements applied only to the present situation.

CREW SAVED AS VESSEL BURNS

NORFOLK, Va., March 17.—The master and crew of the fishing schooner Ruth Mildred were brought safely ashore today from their craft which caught fire and burned to the water's edge last night.

Other vessels from the fishing fleet operating out of Hampton, Va., went to the Ruth Mildred's assistance immediately after the fire broke out. Half an hour after the fire began, the master of the Ruth Mildred and her crew of five were taken aboard the schooner Ariel which came into port this morning.

ROOSEVELT KEEPS LEAD OVER MURRAY

BISMARCK, N. D., March 17.—A United Press tabulation of votes today gave Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York a commanding majority in the Democratic presidential preference primary over his Oklahoma opponent Gov. William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray.

The vote, as reported to the United Press from more than half of the state's 2,192 precincts, was: Roosevelt 12,957; Murray 12,751.

The first test of the New York executive against the "grass roots" candidacy of Murray indicated strong Roosevelt sentiment even in rural sections of this wheat growing state which had been counted as favorable to the Oklahoma governor.

LONGEST DISTANCE FIRE ALARM RECORD

CAMBRIDGE, O., March 17.—Mrs. George Williams claims the longest distance fire alarm record. While talking over the telephone to her son, Harold in Bluefield, W. Va., she screamed a warning and dropped the phone.

Her son hurriedly called the Cambridge long distance operator who notified the fire department. The distance from Bluefield to Cambridge is 220 miles.

STOIC INDIANS SIT WHILE COURT TRIES FELLOW TRIBESMAN

Await White Man's Justice In Murder Case

GLOBE, Ariz., March 17.—Fat, blanketed Indian squaws, and wooden faced Apache braves, squat on their heels outside the little court room here waiting for the white man's justice they little comprehend to decide the fate of Goiny Seymour, their tribesman.

Seymour is accused of the murder of Henrietta Schmerler, Columbia University co-ed who paid with her life for an attempt to learn the customs of the Indians.

The squaws, many with tiny squalling papooses strapped to their backs, stolidly weave strange designs into grass and reed baskets, as they wait. The bucks sit, chewing endless wads of tobacco, or puffing slowly on cheap cigarettes.

They wonder at the stir over a simple killing. An Indian tribunal of headmen only a generation or so ago quickly would have settled the case. They would have found Seymour guilty and stoned him to death, or freed him of blame, a day or so after the crime.

Inside the courtroom another Apache, Robert Gatewood, had violated traditions of the close-mouthed tribe, by telling a story that may hang Seymour.

Gatewood, 19, range rider, told of seeing Seymour standing at a basin, washing from his hands what appeared to be blood.

Seymour paled and bowed his head as Gatewood described the meeting.

"What have you been doing?" Gatewood said he asked.

"Seymour said: 'I've killed the white woman.'"

"I asked him: 'Where?' He said: 'I don't know; down below somewhere. I was with the white woman. I married her. She said she'd tell I killed her. That's why. Don't tell on me, Robert.'"

Gatewood said the next day he saw Seymour again, and asked if he remembered what he had told him the night before.

"He answered: 'He said he'd kill me, too, if I told.'"

Gatewood's sister, a plump, placid girl, mother of Seymour's two children, sat passively in a front row chair, her feelings well concealed.

Miss Schmerler came to the White River reservation last June to study Apache life. She was not seen alive after she rode off with Seymour toward a native dance neither ever reached.

GOVERNOR REVEALS NEW LIBERAL STAND AT DRY CONFERENCE

Barely Audible Hisses Greet Speech To W. C. T. U.

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—A bare suggestion of hisses and a chorus of undertone "no-es" greeted a statement of prohibition views by Governor George White last night during a regional meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union here.

The governor, a Democratic candidate for the nomination for president of the United States, told the women they were making a mistake in opposing a referendum on the eighteenth amendment. "The question should be resubmitted to the people," said the governor.

"If for no other reason than to refute charges of the wets that the measure was pushed through when soldiers were overseas during the World War."

The governor's unexpected statement caused a small flurry. Previously, during a two-day meeting, two dry candidates had been endorsed and resolutions had been passed voicing opposition to resubmission.

Climaxing his brief address, Governor White said: "Prohibition has not met with expectations of the people. It is the right of my record to at least make these suggestions for your careful consideration."

Two candidates, Attorney General Gilbert Bellman, Republican aspirant to membership in the United States senate, and Ohio Supreme Court Judge Florence E. Allen, who seeks election to Congress, were apparently disappointed by the women for their liberal views toward prohibition.

ATTORNEY PROTESTS BRACHER PETITION

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—Thomas H. Wick, attorney of Dayton, late Wednesday filed a formal protest of the candidacy for the Republican nomination as United States senator of Charles A. Bracher, of Dayton. The protest, filed with the secretary of state, alleged that Bracher had not complied fully with provisions of Ohio law in filing his declaration of candidacy. It asked that Bracher's name be withdrawn and not be printed on the ballot.

DETROIT, March 17.—Search for two school girls, who vanished from homes of their wealthy parents after saving their lunch money "to see the world," today extended into three states.

Detroit authorities notified police in New York and Chicago to arrest the girls, Joan McPherson, 13, daughter of John P. McPherson, Assistant Attorney General of Michigan, and Margaret Menzel, 12, daughter of Stephen Menzel, an executive of the Graham-Paige motor company.

KODAK HEIRESS

The only close relative of the late George Eastman, Mrs. George B. Dryden of Evanston, Ill., a niece of the Rochester philanthropist, is expected to inherit a large share of the Eastman estate. Although Eastman at one time was one of the world's richest men, he gave away nearly $100,000,000, believed to be five times the amount he could call his own at the time of his death.

STRIKERS CHECKED BY AUTHORITIES IN GATHERING AT MINE

Officers Use Tear Gas To Repulse Attackers

ATHENS, O., March 17.—A crowd of approximately 1,300 striking miners which gathered near the Black Diamond mine, operated by the Black Diamond Coal Co., of Columbus, at Lathrop, near here, was fought back with tear gas bombs by Sheriff Wayne Wingett, his deputies and Ohio National Guard officers today.

The Black Diamond mine resumed operation yesterday when fifty-six men returned to work. It was the first mine opened since the strike began February 1.

Today's demonstration occurred about 2:30 a. m. when the strikers, who had gathered from throughout the Hocking Valley district, attempted to cross a bridge leading into the mining village of Lathrop.

Wingett and the guardsmen urged the strikers to turn back. They refused. The officers tossed tear gas bombs into the crowd.

The superintendent said he would have a conference with officers of the coal company at Columbus who would advise Col. John Sheller, Ohio National Guard officer in this district, by Saturday whether attempts will be made to continue operation of the mine.

Following today's demonstration, Wingett and Bolin declared that if the mines are going to continue to attempt to operate throughout the Hocking Valley, they would have to help to maintain order from other and outside sources.

A report of this morning's disorder was made by Major John A. Blount, of Hillsboro to Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, at Columbus. He said quiet prevailed in the valley after the mine crowd was dispersed.

NEW HYME MARTIN TRIAL IS APPEALED

CLEVELAND, O., March 17.—Prosecutor P. L. A. Lehighley today appealed to the Ohio Supreme Court to set aside an appellate court decision ordering a new trial for Hyman Martin, under sentence of life imprisonment in connection with the murder of former Councilman William E. Potter.

The state supreme court today received a brief of sixty-three pages, mailed by Lehighley yesterday, in which he described the ruling of the court of appeals at Lima as "unusual."

Oral arguments to the supreme court are to be made, but probably not before the middle of next month, in the opinion of court observers.

ANTI-HOARDING DRIVE SUCCEEDS

MASSILLON, O., March 17.—Massillon held an anti-hoarding drive of its own which was highly successful.

The local American Legion post, which sponsored the campaign, reported that more than 1,100 persons promised to spend an aggregate of $406,389 during the next sixty days.

AGREES ON SESSION TO PROVIDE RELIEF SOUGHT BY CITIES

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—The general assembly of Ohio will be called into extraordinary session March 29 for enactment of relief legislation.

Governor George White today announced he had decided to recall the legislators for a single purpose — to assist Ohio communities unable to meet their own unemployment and poor relief needs.

The formal call will be issued either Friday or Saturday, the governor said. Members of the legislature will be recalled through their sergeant-at-arms.

The governor explained the session would be delayed until March 29 because of the Easter holidays.

Shortly after the general assembly convenes, the chief executive will appear before the joint session of the two houses to deliver his executive message.

In an informal statement the governor said his previously announced plan for relief legislation would not be changed materially.

He was convinced, he said, "that a vast majority of Ohio communities could, by sacrifice and coordination of all efforts, meet their relief problems."

"However, in large cities," the executive continued, "There is incontestable evidence that means at their disposal are far below those necessary to meet relief demands for the year."

"The state has set an example in cutting expenses; many counties and cities have followed this example, or are doing so, but their efforts, supplemented by contributions to charitable relief funds, are insufficient."

"The state of Ohio must not be charged with permitting any of its citizens to starve."

"I have, therefore, decided to call the general assembly."

"I will submit to it a plan which already has been made public in outline."

Major provisions of the plan are an additional one per cent excise tax on gross earnings of public utilities, excluding transportation companies, but including intrastate pullman transportation, and a proposal which would enable local government subdivisions to use their portion of the gasoline and automobile license tag funds for a limited period, provided such use was deemed necessary.

The additional utility tax would be re-allotted to the various counties for purpose of retiring relief bonds, over a period of five years.

Before taxing authorities of the counties could take advantage of the proposed act, it would be necessary for the state tax commission and the state director of welfare to approve issuance of the bonds after a determination of the need for relief.

It was estimated that $11,000,000 of bonds could be issued under terms of this proposal in a 30-day period. The yearly collection was estimated at $2,200,000.

A total of approximately $9,000,000, the governor believes could be made available to counties, cities, townships and villages, from divers

WHITE COMMUTES SENTENCE OF MAN

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—The sentence of Lewis Johns, Jr., of Zanesville, scheduled to die in the electric chair at Ohio Penitentiary Friday night, was commuted to life imprisonment today by Gov. George White.

Johns was convicted of the slaying of Henry H. Gay, Civil War veteran of Cannelville.

The governor's decision was made upon recommendation of S. P. Dunkle, his executive secretary, and the Ohio board of parole.

Dunkle had investigated the case since receiving the confession of William Gibson, also of Zanesville, absolving Johns of the actual slaying of Gay, which took place during the preparation of a robbery on March 7, 1931.

TWO SCHOOL GIRLS SOUGHT; MAY HAVE LEFT HOMES TO SEE WORLD

DETROIT, March 17.—Search for two school girls, who vanished from homes of their wealthy parents after saving their lunch money "to see the world," today extended into three states.

Detroit authorities notified police in New York and Chicago to arrest the girls, Joan McPherson, 13, daughter of John P. McPherson, Assistant Attorney General of Michigan, and Margaret Menzel, 12, daughter of Stephen Menzel, an executive of the Graham-Paige motor company.

The two adventurers left the Menzel home Tuesday night, in the Menzels' expensive automobile. Their parents found a note, which read: "Don't worry, We'll be back sometime." Class-mates at Grosse Pointe School told authorities the girls had been planning a trip to New York or Chicago for several weeks. They had saved $10 each from their school lunch money, the other students said.

Prison Tamed 'Jazz Girl' Emerges Sombre Woman

Repentant and Again Happy San Francisco Girl, Who Killed Mother, Is Free After Seven Years.

DOROTHY ELLINGSON AS SHE IS TO-DAY. ♦ MRS. ANNIE ELLINGSON Seven years behind the sombre walls of San Quentin Prison have tamed the "Tiger Girl." The release from the California prison of Dorothy Ellingson, San Francisco's "Jazz Girl," or "Tiger Girl," nicknames applied to her by reporters who covered her trial, recalls the sensation created when Dorothy shot and killed her mother in 1925. Then but sixteen, Dorothy was reprimanded because of her rowdy associates. In a fit of anger she murdered the woman who bore her. The country was shocked at the crime and the posed indifference of the gin-swinging, dancing loving "Jazz Girl" of sixteen. Dorothy was sentenced to ten years in dreaded San Quentin and her incarceration there for seven years has had its effect. Released on parole for good behavior, Dorothy, the personification of the "younger generation" movement at its maddest and wildest, has been regenerated. While in prison she turned to religion for solace and each Sunday attended chapel, praying for forgiveness. Repentant, brave and again happy, Dorothy Ellingson emerged a thoughtful, gracious woman. And her father, Joseph Ellingson, of San Francisco, is glad to have his girl home again.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—The gates of somber San Quentin prison have opened and closed behind attractive Dorothy Ellingson. Unless you have an exceptional memory you will not remember Dorothy Ellingson's name.

However, seven years ago that same name symbolized an entire era—the jazz age—at its maddest and wildest. Dorothy Ellingson is the young San Francisco girl who shot her mother to death on January 13, 1925, because the parent refused to allow her to go to a rowdy party.

It is doubtful that Dorothy—nicknamed the "Tiger Girl" by criminal courts reporters—is so eager for rowdy parties after seven years in San Quentin. She is on parole, under the watchful eyes of California penal authorities. But even if she weren't, San Quentin officials assert the belief that she would live a quiet and moral life.

Discipline, they say, has drawn the claws of the "Tiger Girl." Her prison record was perfect. She did all that was asked of her and did it well, studied, worked hard and broke none of the institution's stern rules.

They're sure she'll make good in the world she left as a matricide whose name screamed from every newspaper front page headline in America seven years ago. They're sure the young woman of 24 has not a trace of the gin-swinging, dance-loving wild girl of seven years.

It's something the San Quentin people do not say often about their released inmates. "She'll be back" is usually their unspoken verdict of sunshine. "She'll come back, as some long-term murderers walk through the iron gates into the 'There's hell in her heart.'"

It is strange that they should think differently of Dorothy Ellingson, who went to the wild party after killing her mother and leaving a heavy-set dead form sprawled on the kitchen floor. But all the recklessness and excitement-eating spirit seemed to go out of the "Tiger Girl" after she had been convicted of the vicious crime. She behaved herself in prison, seemed touched by the warden's efforts to help her. She prayed in the San Quentin chapel each Sunday, asking God to forgive her for the mad and foolish thing she had done.

Her father, who stood by her during the trial, has taken her back with him. Like the San Quentin people, he thinks her seven years behind gray prison walls have regenerated Dorothy.

In the world the "Tiger Girl" now enters once again she will find a different "younger generation." The steam has sizzled out of the "hot-act" age. There are still cliques of boys and girls in their teens who find their fun in all-night automobile rides, dance halls and flask-tipping. But there are not so many of them.

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, causing a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system. If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

NEW KLONDIKE?

REPORTS of a "gold rush" precipitated by the recent discovery of traces of gold in a locality near Spring Valley, were described as "grossly exaggerated" by village residents Tuesday.

One prominent citizen revealed there were slight indications of the possible existence of small particles of the precious metal on the land of George Wood, a mile and one-half below the village, near Roxanna, but there was no evidence of a sufficient amount to bring much profit.

sion of their portion of the gasoline and license tax funds, under a legislative act.

Use of money from these funds would be permitted until March 1, 1933.

The governor's plan further proposes that needs of destitute school children would be taken care of under a reenactment of a section of the general code enabling boards of education to furnish the necessities of life to children who otherwise cannot attend school. Boards of education without funds may apply to the county commissioners for the necessary money to carry out this section.

The proposal embracing diversion of gasoline and license tax money by local subdivisions was termed a "home rule proposition." Local officials would determine whether or not they would take advantage of it.

Governor White has explained that his plan of relief legislation will not raise the entire amounts thought necessary by some of the cities, but that he believed the funds enumerated would meet the needs of all subdivisions "if rigid economy is enforced."

He has proposed that, for the purpose of supervising relief expenditures, the legislature permit creation of a state relief commission of nine members to serve without remuneration.

Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican of Cincinnati, chairman of the joint taxation committee of the 86th general assembly, told Governor White following his conference with the committee, in substance, that "if he calls a special session we will be glad to work out with him details of the plan." Cooperation of the committee was also pledged by Rep. Charles H. Jones, (R), Jackson.

HUNTER TELLS HOW HE FOUND EXPLORER

held prisoner for over five years and that the last of his companions had died the year before. (His companions were his son, Jack, and an Englishman named Raleigh Rimwell.)

When he told me this he became so emotional he could not continue speaking. He said nothing concerning the treatment given him by the Indians. He wore Indian garb.

He did not appear to be suffering from hunger or sickness. But obviously he was completely dominated by the native chief.

I promised him I would deliver his message and set off for Sao Paulo, and after six weeks difficult journey made my report to the British Consul General, Arthur Abbott. He considered my report the most definite clue yet found to Col. Fawcett's fate.

I believe the man I saw in the jungle was the missing explorer.

Rattin speaks several Brazilian dialects as well as the difficult Guarany language and believes that this knowledge prevented him from being held captive at the indian village. He said, however, he never had been bothered by the natives during his fourteen years' experience in the jungles.

Reference to communicating with "a farmer named Paget" presumably referred to Sir Ralph Spencer Paget, who was British ambassador to Brazil from 1918 to 1920 at the time when Col. Fawcett was making periodical trips into the Brazilian jungle.

The present ambassador to

Brazil is Sir William Seeds, appointed in 1930. It was believed that Rattin might have confused the word "farmer" with "former."

AGREES ON SESSION TO PROVIDE RELIEF SOUGHT BY CITIES

tion of their portion of the gasoline and license tax funds, under a legislative act.

Use of money from these funds would be permitted until March 1, 1933.

The governor's plan further proposes that needs of destitute school children would be taken care of under a reenactment of a section of the general code enabling boards of education to furnish the necessities of life to children who otherwise cannot attend school. Boards of education without funds may apply to the county commissioners for the necessary money to carry out this section.

The proposal embracing diversion of gasoline and license tax money by local subdivisions was termed a "home rule proposition." Local officials would determine whether or not they would take advantage of it.

Governor White has explained that his plan of relief legislation will not raise the entire amounts thought necessary by some of the cities, but that he believed the funds enumerated would meet the needs of all subdivisions "if rigid economy is enforced."

He has proposed that, for the purpose of supervising relief expenditures, the legislature permit creation of a state relief commission of nine members to serve without remuneration.

Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican, of Cincinnati, chairman of the joint taxation committee of the 87th general assembly, told Governor White following his conference with the committee, in substance, that "if he calls a special session we will be glad to work out with him details of the plan." Cooperation of the committee was also pledged by Rep. Charles H. Jones, (R), Jackson.

RABBI WILL SPEAK IN DAYTON

RABBI JACOB TARSHISH

Rabbi Jacob Tarshish of Columbus, noted radio speaker, will give a public address in Dayton Wednesday night, March 23, at Memorial Hall on "What is Wrong With the World Today" under auspices of the Hadassah Society for the benefit of its Hospital Fund.

Rabbi Tarshish has a large following who listen to his stirring radio sermons on topics of the day, over station WAIU, Columbus at 11 each Sunday. Authorities say his voice is one of the best on the air and his mail is heavier than that of any other program and requires two secretaries to handle it.

DAYTON FIRM WILL PRINT POLL BOOKS

Contract for printing poll books and other supplies for both the May primary and November general elections in Greene County was awarded to The Johnson-Watson Co., Dayton, on its low bid of $589, by the board of elections Wednesday night. Two bids were considered.

The Dayton firm will furnish forty-eight sets of combined poll books, tally sheets, precinct supplies and cards of instruction for each election.

After examining the nominating petitions to determine the sufficiency of the signatures, the board also approved the declarations of candidacy of all Republican and Democratic candidates for county offices at the May primary.

held prisoner for over five years and that the last of his companions had died the year before. (His companions were his son, Jack, and an Englishman named Raleigh Rim-mell.)

When he told me this he became so emotional he could not continue speaking. He said nothing concerning the treatment given him by the Indians. He wore Indian garb.

He did not appear to be suffering from hunger or sickness. But obviously he was completely dominated by the native chief.

I promised him I would deliver his message and set off for Sao Paulo, and after six weeks difficult journey made my report to the British Consul General, Arthur Abbott. He considered my report the most definite clue yet found to Col. Fawcett's fate.

I believe the man I saw in the jungle was the missing explorer.

Rattin speaks several Brazilian dialects as well as the difficult Guarany language and believes that this knowledge prevented him from being held captive at the Indian village. He said, however, he never had been bothered by the natives during his fourteen years' experience in the jungles.

Reference to communicating with "a farmer named Page" presumably referred to Sir Ralph Spencer Page, who was British ambassador to Brazil from 1918 to 1920 at the time when Col. Fawcett was making periodical trips into the Brazilian jungle.

The present ambassador to

Brazil is Sir William Seeds, appointed in 1930. It was believed that Rattin might have confused the word "farmer" with "former."

CONFIRMS FAITH

The outcome of Sunday's presidential voting in Germany confirms the world's faith in the fundamental soundness of the German people. Character prevailed against claptrap. Germany's Grand Old Man failed by only 168,000 votes of a clear majority of the 37,660,000 ballots cast. A combination of National Socialists, Communists, Nationalists and Revolorizationists would be necessary to block the re-election of President von Hindenburg in the runoff on April 10. The unlikelihood of bringing about any such incongruous combination is obvious. Von Hindenburg is generally considered as good as re-elected.

The effect will be felt far beyond the borders of Germany. Across the Rhine in France it will be taken as a rebuke to the chauvinism of Adolf Hitler and his policy of repudiation. Across the Channel in England, across the Atlantic in this Country, wherever von Hindenburg is, as Chancellor Bruening declared in an impassioned moment, a symbol of the German Nation, a feeling will prevail that Civil War in Germany has been averted and better times promised the German Reich at home and abroad. The Republic is safe. Any other outcome on Sunday's primary would have resulted in chaos.

While it is true that no other man in Germany today could have held the Nation as true to the course of rational conservatism as President von Hindenburg did, attributing Sunday's vote to his personality is inaccurate. The 18,000,000 German electors who voted for him, voted primarily for a principle. They supported von Hindenburg because he shares that principle with his reflecting countrymen. They have confidence in the rugged firmness of his loyalty to Germany.

Although he is not a believer in republicanism, von Hindenburg has accepted the people's will and served the Republic as faithfully as he did the Empire, as long as the latter lasted. Conservative Germany, which is still predominant, stands for law and order and industry and honesty. The fact that President von Hindenburg pre-eminently exemplifies those things explains why the German people have rallied about him as they would hug an anchor in a storm.

IVAR KREUGER

So far as the average man on the street is concerned, Ivar Kreuger becomes a far better known figure in death than he ever was in life. Yet, his career, highly tragic in its conclusion, was romantic enough while being lived to have attracted all sorts of attention had it received a normal amount of publicity.

"The Match King's" rise from the self-selected position of workman in this Country, to which he came from Sweden in search of information and experience, was sensational and almost meteoric on the business side. There it was full of speed and strenuousness. But otherwise, Kreuger's life was the existence of a person who shunned the limelight, and while enjoying things colorfully, also enjoyed them quietly. Mr. Kreuger's personality was little known except to intimates. In some ways the man seems to have been almost a recluse.

So it is purely because of its possible after effect, that the suicide of Mr. Kreuger becomes a matter of world interest. The result of the act in a Paris apartment has already closed the Stockholm Exchange and has brought dismay to Sweden and apprehension to financial Europe in general. Just what the event will ultimately mean, nobody can possibly tell at this time, but until the condition of The Kreuger & Toll Co. and its subsidiaries is known, and the general state of Mr. Kreuger's personal affairs can be made plainer, the Continent is bound to remain more or less dismayed and braced for a shock. However, it is not believed that either the United States or Great Britain will be affected by developments.

The possibility that it was overstrain and overwork that brought about the death of Kreuger, rather than an actual crisis of fortune, exists meanwhile to modify the anxiety of the financial centers of several countries.

REORGANIZATION BILL

The vote on the George departmental reorganization bill, called up for action by Senator Vandenberg, was sufficiently close to warrant an expectation that it may get a majority in the Senate if later it is presented alone, on its merits, and not as a rider to another measure. The fact that the bill was favored by a prominent Southern Democrat and received the support of eight members of the Democratic Party, is quite significant in view of the flurry into which Speaker Garner fell when President Hoover sent his message to Congress asking substantially the action contemplated in the George bill.

The measure, as it stands, is, in fact, a challenge to the members of Congress who have been talking about departmental reorganization. It gives them a chance to show how sincere they are.

That the need for reorganization is large and pressing, cannot be gainsaid. And it is equally clear that no early action can be obtained except by resort to the method provided for in the pending measure; that is, by permitting the Chief Executive to make consolidations, transfers and eliminations as he considers wise, his action being subject to review by Congress.

Mr. Hoover has what Congress lacks, initiative and courage to act. Congress, on the other hand, by retaining power to check the President will have a safeguard in case the President undertakes to do things which the body considers unwise; if, for example, he lets himself run too much to bureaucracy. National feeling is actively in favor of departmental reorganization. For the Country knows that if the business is properly undertaken and carried through, it will mean considerable increase in Federal efficiency and considerable saving of Federal money.

"DEDUCTION" DUE

Charles W. Pershall, banker in Granite City, Ill., wants to know from the Federal Government whether $40,000 which he says, he paid kidnappers for his release last February may be considered a "deduction" when he makes out his income tax return.

If Mr. Pershall can show that he paid the sum mentioned as a ransom, there ought to be no question about its inclusion as a deduction. As far back as the time of Hammurabi in old Babylon, it was set forth in a legal code which is more or less an ancestor of ours, that where brigands captured and robbed a man, the Government responsible for his safety must make restoration to him for what he had lost.

In the United States, it would be financially impossible to go that far, because the annual mulcting of citizens through racketeering, robbery, blackmail and extortion runs into the billions. But, certainly, where a man suffers a monetary loss through criminal violence, he should at least be excused from paying any tax on the sum of which he has been deprived, because the Government which is supposed to protect him, has failed to do its duty.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK. — Behind their masks: People I know:

Gracie is a "strip woman" for one of the burlesque theatres. Which is to say, she removes her outer garments successively as the gapers down front applaud, until she remains in about the same covering as Earl Carroll puts on his girls to begin with.

Gracie is married and as meticulously proper offstage as the most prudish could demand. Her husband plays the violin-cello in one of the big radio orchestras, and they manage somehow to eat two meals together daily in their flat. Gracie cooks them.

For her public unveilings Gracie receives the stupendous salary of $30 a week. But it is steady, unlike her previous occupations of artist, model, and chorus girl in a revue. Fortunately, Gracie has been booked for the past three months on the "subway circuit," so that her home life hasn't been entirely destroyed.

She is more modest, more careful about her skirts on buses and subway seats, than any debutante I know. She is a good wife. Her husband writes songs in his spare time, and if one of these ever clicks, Gracie will be able to retire.

EDGAR

Edgar is what is termed a "hack writer." He is terrifically popular, even if his bank balance doesn't indicate it. He has written, in his time, for some 200 different publications, many of which you have no doubt never heard.

He has made as much as $50,000 in a year, and as little as $236.30. He has written the "true confessions" of gangsters, gun-mollies, Wall Street wolves, Monte Carlo wasters and drug-fiends.

Edgar neither drinks nor smokes. He came to New York about ten years ago, with the manuscript of the "Great American Novel" under his arm. In school, he was too high-brow to make many friends. He did, however, make "The Dial," and other magazines of the purple intelligentsia with his scribbles.

His first novel has never found a publisher. He has, however, five volumes to his credit. These are not the real titles but they will give you an idea: "Her Alabaster Heritage," "Good Girl, Bad Girl," "The Mystery of the Frozen Rubies," and "Whose Wife?"

When the depression came along, Edgar thought he would have time to go back and polish up his first and only sincere book. He discovered he had lost all interest in it.

EDNA

Edna was very pretty when she came to New York about ten years ago. She was frank in telling her intimates that she intended to marry money. She was pointedly snobbish to young men of no means, and pointedly nice to young men in the money.

She achieved her ambition. She snared her gilt-edged hubby—a young gentleman who could have written a check, and cashed it, for $4,000,000.

Now Edna does her own washing. Hubby is not even bronze-plated any more. His gift has become shabby. Anyway, they're broke. And Edna is lyrically happy for the first time in her life. She is in love with him.

GOING OVER IT WITH A FINE COMB!

DO NOT ENCOURAGE FINICKY HABITS IN FAMILY, EDUCATOR TELLS FAMILY

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D. Head Division Parental Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

"I don't want this oatmeal, give me some corn flakes," commands the boy of eight. His mother gets the corn flakes. May arrives. "I want a soft boiled egg this morning, mother." "Make it two fried with a little bacon, for me. Remember I like them turned." adds Adolescent Fred. Dad orders up some buttered toast. "A slice for me, too, hollers May."

Do you make your home dining room a restaurant? Do you serve food to your children a la carte? A great many mothers do. Some wear themselves out being chefs and waitresses for the other members of the family. In doing so they make themselves their children's slaves, teach them to be finicky about food, and rob them of good qualities of character.

For children of school age to eat happily what is set before them, asking no questions, making no remarks, is a goal not too high to reach at home. Expect the same of all adults. Any father who carries sportsmanship into his home and cares to set good models of conduct before his children learns to eat the regular family meal.

If you desire your children to acquire good food habits and grow up to welcome guests at meals in their homes, serve them merely the family meal.

No reason why the members of the family should not take turns in making, on the evening before, the choice of cereal for the family breakfast, within a range convenient to the mother or the maid. Then let all the family abide by this decision asking in the morning for no substitutes. At other meals, except for the children very young, let there be one menu for the group. Every child, old enough will be served with some of each food. If it is one of which he is not very fond honor his request for a very small helping. If it is one particularly disliked be satisfied if his helping is exceedingly small. Have no arguments, no scenes; have even no remarks about food. Let each child learn that complaint about his food automatically removes him from the family group.

Keep the family conversation above the stomach. Make it interesting in a cheery atmosphere. In some homes it is not always convenient nor always desirable for either parent to rise early enough to eat breakfast with the high school child who may leave to go to school very early. In that event he selects and prepares his own food. What he gains from independence may be very wholesome.

If, however, the child does not choose enough or proper food for breakfast then his mother, where there is no other help, can afford to make considerable sacrifice to rise on time to prepare breakfast. In any event, either she or the father or both should nearly always eat breakfast with him in order to send him off for the school day's work with cheer and good wishes.

In most homes the family can eat the evening meal together. When properly conducted this dinner hour is the most valuable means of education which the child can have anywhere.

When all eat together the same foods in an atmosphere of calm and leisure, where each one learns to be courteous and considerate of every other member, and where they engage freely in conversation the whole setting helps to unify.

Table d'hôte at home for family happiness and character development. A la carte for their destruction.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Planning For Children In the successful financing of the home the problems of children are fundamental.

The minimum cost of bringing a baby safely into the world, according to hospitals, physicians and welfare workers, is $275; $300 is a safer figure.

This means that if a young couple plans for the coming of a little stranger at the end of the first year of marriage, they should set aside $33 a month in their budget for this purpose.

The Salvation Army, which has made a special effort to determine the cost of bringing up children by the compilation of a large number of cases, gives the following minimum costs:

For the first six months of the child's life the cost of food, clothing and equipment will not be less than $25 a month. This does not include the cost of any possible illness. For the next 18 months this charge may be modified somewhat, but not much.

These figures are for the average American family.

Effects Of Deficient Secretion

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The secretion of any gland may be too much or too little. In the case of glands with ducts pouring their secretion into a body cavity, these derangements are more or less easily taken care of. In the case of the ductless glands, such as the thyroid, the conditions must be suspected from the symptoms.

The conditions we have been considering this week are those of increase in thyroid secretion, with or without increase in the size of the gland.

But the thyroid can also fail to secrete enough of its characteristic secretion. This may occur either in infancy or come on gradually during adult life. In the first case it is called cretinism, and in the second, myxoedema.

Cretinism may be present at birth, especially in children born of parents who live in a goitrous district. In some parts of Switzerland cretins are very common. The thyroid gland in these children is completely atrophied. It is probably due to lack of iodine in the mother's food. The children are stunted in growth, mentally stupid to the point of idiocy, and deformed.

Treatment, by feeding the child thyroid extract, is fairly successful in promoting growth and stimulating the mental powers.

To be successful, however, it must be begun early in life. The diagnosis must be made before the end of the second year. The condition may be suspected when a baby is extremely heavy at birth—over nine pounds. Few normal babies weigh more than nine pounds at birth—when you hear a proud parent boasting of an eleven-pound baby, look out. The cretinous baby is backward in intelligence, late in sitting up and walking, has a coarse skin and delayed dentition.

Myxoedema, the form of deficient secretion of the thyroid, which appears in adult life, affects mostly women. It comes on gradually, usually after the end of the change of life, and so slowly that the patient or friends are hardly aware of its existence. The patient becomes drowsy and indifferent, taking less and less interest in things around her. The weight increases with a peculiar thickening of the skin. The hair is likely to fall out and become coarse. The patient complains of being cold. There is a yellowish muddiness of the complexion.

There are few diseases in which the diagnosis is so frequently missed. One case recently brought to my attention had been treated in a sanitarium for melancholia for over a year. Another, on account of the complexion which was mistaken for jaundice, was advised to have the gallbladder removed. Frequently such cases are suspected of having pernicious anemia, and because it is a disease of later life and kidney changes may also be present, of Bright's disease.

It is unfortunate that this is so because so much can be done for these patients by treatment, which consists in feeding them thyroid extract. An entire change in personality may result—the patient loses weight, the hair comes back, the skin clears up, and mental interest in things is reawakened.

Wife Is Not Contented

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: Since the depression my husband has been out of work. We couldn't continue to pay rent and other bills so had to move in with his parents."

"I am not contented living with them, but I think I would feel different about it if it wasn't for the fact that they are not of my nationality. They are good, honest American citizens and have a nice family. Their children are American born."

"Their ways and ideas being different from American people makes it difficult for me to get used to them, although they treat me nice."

"My husband is a home loving man. He cares for each other a lot, and both are fond of children. He is affectionate but strict. At times I get discouraged at the thought of how long we will have to live with his family, and wonder if I didn't make a mistake when I married a man of different nationality and religion. Before we were married it was understood that if there were any children I could bring them up in my religion, but I am now afraid my husband will change his mind."

"Do you think it would be better to break up or make the best of the situation and take a chance if there are any children? I seem to have an inferior feeling because of their nationality. Am I wrong to feel that way? We have been married three years and are both past 25."

MRS. C.

Is this the first cloud in your sky since you were married, Mrs. C.? If so it is not very sporting of you to think of breaking up, is it? I think I would put that out of my mind if I were you. Didn't you promise to love and cherish "until death do us part?"

You know I think you have a wonderful opportunity in living with your husband's people for what we all hope will be only a short time. The very fact that their ways and customs are different from yours should make you anxious to get an insight into them. You can get your mother-in-law to show you how to make some of the famous dishes of her country, and maybe you can learn to talk in their language—at least, get a smattering of it.

Instead of there being any feelings of inferiority on either side, you should be mutually helpful and interested in one another.

You should be so grateful, too, that your father and mother-in-law have taken you in and been so nice to you in your time of need, that you should try hard to think of ways to repay them in service and courtesies. It is doubtless a little trying for them, to have some one not of their own nationality and religion in their home. So you must make it as easy for them as possible.

And as for the children you may have and their religious training. Why should you think your husband will go back on his word? And why cross that bridge until you come to it? If he should feel that the children come—that he has rashly promised that you should rear them in your faith, compromise with him, if possible. Faiths are basically the same, and ideals are more important than the particular faith in which a person was brought up.

Manicurist Asks Advice

By GLADYS GLAD

"DEAR MISS GLAD: Since I've been rather low in funds during the past few months, I've been obliged to do my own manicuring. I'm fairly good at it, but when I attempt to remove the excess cuticle with clippers, I often cut too deeply and draw blood. How can I make sure that such cuts do not become infected?"

"ERMINIE: To treat the sort of cut you describe, press a bleeding area with a piece of absorbent cotton soaked in peroxide or dilute alcohol. After this, apply a bit of white iodine. It might prove beneficial to then cover the cut with collodion."

"Dear Miss Glad: I'm so delighted with the present condition of my skin that I simply had to write and thank you for helping to make it so smooth and clear. You see, my skin was in an awful condition before I started following the advice in your 'Beauty Culture' booklet. It was marked by pimples, blackheads and other blemishes. But it isn't any longer, thanks to you. However, to get down to my present problem—I'm thinking of getting a permanent. And I was wondering if it is possible to get a wave that will not require finger-waving after shampoos. Do you think so?"

"FRANCES M.: Some textures of hair are easier to set and wave than others. But to my knowledge, no head of hair, after having been shampooed and combed out smoothly will of its own accord form into even, well-placed waves. If a smooth, attractive wave is desired the hair must be finger-waved after each shampoo, or must at least be given a "push wave." This is executed merely by pushing the hair upward while moist so that it falls into waves, and then deepening and pressing the waves into place with the fingers. However, not all hair can be waved easily by this method, and usually a regular finger-waving is required to set the wave most attractively.

"Dear Miss Glad: I've heard that cornmeal is an excellent skin beautifier. Is this really true? If so, could you tell me just how the cornmeal should be used?"

"MANDY: Cornmeal can indeed be used to improve the condition of the skin. It can be used alone on a moistened and slightly lathered washcloth as a skin facer. Or it can be made into a face mask."

To prepare the face mask, one-half cup of the cornmeal should be combined with enough milk to form a thick, smooth paste that will spread easily.

The skin should be thoroughly cleansed with cleansing cream and then with soap and water before the mask is applied. Then the paste should be spread generously over the face and permitted to dry.

When thoroughly dry remove with tepid water and a soft cloth. Finish with bit of nourishing cream.

CONFIRMS FAITH

The outcome of Sunday's presidential voting in Germany confirms the world's faith in the fundamental soundness of the German people. Character prevailed against claptrap. Germany's Grand Old Man failed by only 169,000 votes of a clear majority of the 37,660,000 ballots cast. A combination of National Socialists, Communists, Nationalists and Revolutonists would be necessary to block the re-election of President von Hindenburg in the runoff on April 10. The unlikelihood of bringing about any such incongruous combination is obvious. Von Hindenburg is generally considered as good as re-elected.

The effect will be felt far beyond the borders of Germany. Across the Rhine in France it will be taken as a rebuke to the chauvinism of Adolf Hitler and his policy of repudiation. Across the Channel in England, across the Atlantic in this Country, wherever von Hindenburg is, as Chancellor Bruening declared in an impassioned moment, a symbol of the German Nation, a feeling will prevail that Civil War in Germany has been averted and better times promised the German Reich at home and abroad. The Republic is safe. Any other outcome on Sunday's primary would have resulted in chaos.

While it is true that no other man in Germany today could have held the Nation as true to the course of rational conservatism as President von Hindenburg did, attributing Sunday's vote to his personality is inaccurate. The 18,000,000 German electors who voted for him, voted primarily for a principle. They supported von Hindenburg because he shares that principle with his reflecting countrymen. They have confidence in the rugged firmness of his loyalty to Germany.

Although he is not a believer in republicanism, von Hindenburg has accepted the people's will and served the Republic as faithfully as he did the Empire, as long as the latter lasted. Conservative Germany, which is still predominant, stands for law and order and industry and honesty. The fact that President von Hindenburg pre-eminently exemplifies those things explains why the German people have rallied about him as they would hug an anchor in a storm.

IVAR KREUGER

So far as the average man on the street is concerned, Ivar Kreuger becomes a far better known figure in death than he ever was in life. Yet his career, highly tragic in its conclusion, was romantic enough while being lived to have attracted all sorts of attention had it received a normal amount of publicity.

"The Match King's" rise from the self-selected position of workman in this Country, to which he came from Sweden in search of information and experience, was sensational and almost meteoric on the business side. There it was full of speed and strenuousness. But otherwise, Kreuger's life was the existence of a person who shunned the limelight, and while enjoying things colorfully, also enjoyed them quietly. Mr. Kreuger's personality was little known except to intimates. In some ways the man seems to have been almost a recluse.

So it is purely because of its possible after effect, that the suicide of Mr. Kreuger becomes a matter of world interest. The result of the act in a Paris apartment has already closed the Stockholm Exchange and has brought dismay to Sweden and apprehension to financial Europe in general. Just what the event will ultimately mean, nobody can possibly tell at this time, but until the condition of The Kreuger & Toll Co. and its subsidiaries is known, and the general state of Mr. Kreuger's personal affairs can be made plainer, the Continent is bound to remain more or less dismayed and braced for a shock. However, it is not believed that either the United States or Great Britain will be affected by developments.

The possibility that it was overstrain and overwork that brought about the death of Kreuger, rather than an actual crisis of fortune, exists meanwhile to modify the anxiety of the financial centers of several countries.

REORGANIZATION BILL

The vote on the George departmental reorganization bill, called up for action by Senator Vandenberg, was sufficiently close to warrant an expectation that it may get a majority in the Senate if later it is presented alone, on its merits, and not as a rider to another measure. The fact that the bill was fathered by a prominent Southern Democrat and received the support of eight members of the Democratic Party, is quite significant in view of the flurry into which Speaker Garner fell when President Hoover sent his message to Congress asking substantially the action contemplated in the George bill.

The measure, as it stands, is, in fact, a challenge to the members of Congress who have been talking about departmental reorganization. It gives them a chance to show how sincere they are.

That the need for reorganization is large and pressing, cannot be gainsaid. And it is equally clear that no early action can be obtained except by resort to the method provided for in the pending measure; that is, by permitting the Chief Executive to make consolidations, transfers and eliminations as he considers wise, his action being subject to review by Congress.

Mr. Hoover has what Congress lacks, initiative and courage to act. Congress, on the other hand, by retaining power to check the President will have a safeguard in case the President undertakes to do things which the body considers unwise; if, for example, he lets himself run too much to bureaucracy. National feeling is actively in favor of departmental reorganization. For the Country knows that if the business is properly undertaken and carried through, it will mean considerable increase in Federal efficiency and considerable saving of Federal money.

"DEDUCTION" DUE

Charles W. Pershall, banker in Granite City, Ill., wants to know from the Federal Government whether $40,000 which, he says, he paid kidnapers for his release last February may be considered a "deduction" when he makes out his income tax return.

If Mr. Pershall can show that he paid the sum mentioned as a ransom, there ought to be no question about its inclusion as a deduction. As far back as the time of Hammurabi in old Babylon, it was set forth in a legal code which is more or less an ancestor of ours, that where brigands captured and robbed a man, the Government responsible for his safety must make restoration to him for what he had lost.

In the United States, it would be financially impossible to go that far, because the annual mulcting of citizens through racketeering, robbery, blackmail and extortion runs into the billions. But, certainly, where a man suffers a monetary loss through criminal violence, he should at least be excused from paying any tax on the sum of which he has been deprived, because the Government which is supposed to protect him, has failed to do its duty.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK. — Behind their masks: People I know: Gracie is a "strip woman" for one of the burlesque wheels. Which is to say, she removes her outer garments successively as the gapers down front applaud, until she remains in about the same covering Earl Carroll puts on his girls to begin with. Gracie is married and as meticulously proper offstage as the most prudish could demand. Her husband plays the violin-cello in one of the big radio orchestras, and they manage somehow to eat two meals together daily in their flat. Gracie cooks them.

For her public unveilings Gracie receives the stupendous salary of $30 a week. But it is steady, unlike her previous occupations of artist model, and chorus girl in a revue. Fortunately, Gracie has been booked for the past three months on the "subway circuit," so that her home life hasn't been entirely destroyed.

She is more modest, more careful about her skirts on buses and subway seats, than any debutante I know. She is a good wife. Her husband writes songs in his spare time, and if one of these ever clicks, Gracie will be able to retire.

EDGAR

Edgar is what is termed a "hack writer." He is terrifically popular, even if his bank balance doesn't indicate it. He has written, in his time, for some 200 different publications, many of which you have no doubt never heard.

He has made as much as $50,000 in a year, and as little as $236.30. He has written the "true confessions" of gangsters, gun-mobs, Wall Street wolves, Monte Carlo wastrels and drug-fiends.

Edgar neither drinks nor smokes. He came to New York from the "Great American Novel" under his arm. In school, he was too high-brow to make many friends. He did, however, make "The Dial" and other magazines of the purple intelligentsia with his scribbles.

His first novel has never found a publisher. He has, however, five volumes to his credit. These are not the real titles but they will give you an idea: "Her Alabaster Heritage," "Good Girl, Bad Girl," "The Mystery of the Frozen Rubies," and "Whose Wife?"

When the depression came along, Edgar thought he would have time to go back and polish up his first and only sincere book. He discovered he had lost all interest in it.

EDNA

Edna was very pretty when she came to New York about ten years ago. She was frank in telling her intimates that she intended to marry money. She was pointedly snobbish to young men of no means, and pointedly nice to young men in the money.

She achieved her ambition. She snared her gilt-edged hubby—a young gentleman who could have written a check, and cashed it, for $4,000,000.

Now Edna does her own washing. Hubby is not even bronze-plated any more. His gilt has become shabby. Anyway, they're broke. And Edna is lyrically happy for the first time in her life. She is in love with him.

GOING OVER IT WITH A FINE COMB!

DO NOT ENCOURAGE FINICKY HABITS IN FAMILY, EDUCATOR TELLS FAMILY

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D. Head Division Parental Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

"I don't want this oatmeal, give me some corn flakes," commands the boy of eight. His mother gets the corn flakes. May arrives. "I want a soft boiled egg this morning, mother." "Make it two fried with a little bacon, for me. Remember I like them turned," adds Adolescent Fred. Dad orders up some buttered toast. "A slice for me, too, hollers May."

Do you make your home dining room a restaurant? Do you serve food to your children a la carte? A great many mothers do. Some wear themselves out being chefs and waitresses for the other members of the family. In doing so they make themselves their children's slaves, teach them to be finicky about food, and rob them of good qualities of character.

For children of school age to eat happily what is set before them, asking no questions, making no remarks, is a goal not too high to reach at home. Expect the same of all adults. Any father who carries sportsmanship into his home, and cares to set good models of conduct before his children learns to eat the regular family meal.

Keep the family conversation about the stomach. Make it interesting in a cheery atmosphere. In some homes it is not always convenient nor always desirable for either parent to rise early enough to eat breakfast with the high school child who may leave to go to school very early. In that event he selects and prepares his own food. What he gains from independence may be very wholesome.

If, however, the child does not choose enough or proper food for breakfast then his mother, where there is no other help, can afford to make considerable sacrifice to rise on time to prepare breakfast. In any event, either she or the father or both should nearly always eat breakfast with him in order to send him off for the school day's work with cheer and good wishes.

In most homes the family can eat the evening meal together. When properly conducted this dinner hour is the most valuable means of education which the child can have anywhere.

When all eat together the same foods in an atmosphere of calm and leisure, where each one learns to be courteous and considerate of every other member, and where they engage freely in conversation the whole setting helps to unify.

Table d'hôte at home for family happiness and character development. A la carte for their destruction.

Life Whispered I Listened Was It Good Advice?

I went out into the night and the moon shone clear all about me . . . and the perfume of the night was sweet and the shadows fell warmly on the resting earth, and a small bird twittered in a gaunt tree, and Life seemed close about me, and my friend.

And in my egotism I thought to myself, "Now, at this blessed instant, I could talk straight to Life and Life would hear me and answer me and tell me things and tell me all that I wish to know."

So I said, "Life, I would be wise!"

Through the trees I heard a whispering and it seemed I heard a grave voice saying:

"Out of much foolishness you may gain a little wisdom. Out of many mistakes, you may find the hard road. Out of humility you may grow wise. But you may not use that wisdom exclusively for yourself. Use it thus and surely you shall be kind."

So I said, "Life, I would be kind."

And that same strong voice replied:

"Then think of other people. Forget yourself—your aches, your pains, your griefs and irritations, your pride and fears and little troubles. Remember that other people are in this world; remember that my other children are suffering, too."

"But I would also be strong," said I to Life.

"Then remember," said that comforting voice, "the times when you have been petty and you have been weak. Remember the hours when you, too, have done what the strong man does not do, when you have trembled and faltered and failed. Remember your own poor, frail humanity—and thus grow strong."

"And Life, I would be understanding, too!"

"Then look," said Life, "within your own bewildered heart. Shred out your own motives, your own betrayals, your own audacities, your own denials of your own better self. Look within and then look forth and into the hearts of other men. And remember what that wise old son of mine once said, "This, above all, to tune own self be true. Thou canst not then be false to any man."

And the silly little birds still twittered, and the owl went screeching by, and the shadows were warm over the earth and the whisper of the wind died away—and though I could not take oath that Life had spoken to me, in my heart I am sure that this is true.

Poems That Live

"At The Mid Hour of Night" At the mid hour of night, when stars are weeping, I fly To the lone vale we loved, when life shone warm in thine eyes.

And I think oft, if spirits can steal from the regions of air To revisit past scenes of delight, thou wilt come to me there, And tell me our love is remembered even in the sky.

Then I sing the wild song 'twas once such rapture to hear, When our voices commingling breathed like one on the ear;

And, as Echo far off through the vale my sad odorous rolls, I think, O my love! 'tis thy voice from the Kingdom of Souls faintly answering still the notes that once were so dear.

—Thomas Moore (1779-1852)

"MOTHER, I CANNOT MIND MY WHEEL" Mother, I cannot mind my wheel; My fingers ache, my lips are dry; O, if you felt the pain I feel!

No longer could I doubt him true— All other men may use deceit; He always said my eyes were blue, And often swore my lips were sweet.

—Walter Savage Landor (1775-1864)

A SEA CHILD The lover of child Marjory Had one white hour of life brim full;

Now the old nurse, the rocking sea, Hath him to lull. The daughter of child Marjory Hath in her veins, to beat and run, The glad indomitable sea, The strong white sun.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Planning For Children In the successful financing of the home the problems of children are fundamental.

The minimum cost of bringing a baby safely into the world, according to hospitals, physicians and welfare workers, is $275; $300 is a safer figure.

This means that if a young couple plans for the coming of a little stranger at the end of the first year of marriage, they should set aside $33 a month in their budget for this purpose.

The Salvation Army, which has made a special effort to determine the cost of bringing up children by the compilation of a large number of cases, gives the following minimum costs:

For the first six months of the child's life the cost of food, clothing and equipment will not be less than $25 a month. This does not include the cost of any possible illness.

For the next 18 months this charge may be modified somewhat, but not much.

These figures are for the average American family.

Effects Of Deficient Secretion

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The secretion of any gland may be too much or too little. In the case of glands with ducts pouring their secretion into a body cavity, these derangements are more or less easily taken care of. In the case of the ductless glands, such as the thyroid, the conditions must be suspected from the symptoms. The conditions we have been considering this week are those of increase in thyroid secretion, with or without increase in the size of the gland.

But the thyroid can also fail to secrete enough of its characteristic secretion. This may occur either in infancy or come on gradually during adult life. In the first case it is called cretinism, and in the second, myxedema.

Cretinism may be present at birth, especially in children born of parents who live in a gouty district. In some parts of Switzerland cretins are very common. The thyroid gland in these children is completely atrophied. It is probably due to lack of iodine in the mother's food. The children are stunted in growth, mentally stupid to the point of idiocy, and deformed.

Treatment, by feeding the child thyroid extract, is fairly successful in promoting growth and stimulating the mental powers.

To be successful, however, it must be begun early in life. The diagnosis must be made before the end of the second year. The condition may be suspected when a baby is extremely heavy at birth—nine pounds.

Few normal babies weigh more than nine pounds at birth—when you hear a proud parent boasting of an eleven-pound baby, look out. The cretinous baby is backward in intelligence, late in sitting up and walking, has a coarse skin and delayed dentition.

Myxedema, the form of deficient secretion of the thyroid, which appears in adult life, affects mostly women. It comes on gradually, usually after the end of the change of life, and so slowly that the patient or friends are hardly aware of its existence. The patient becomes drowsy and indifferent, taking less and less interest in things around her. The weight increases with a peculiar thickening of the skin. The hair is likely to fall out and become coarse. The patient complains of being cold. There is a yellowish muddiness of the complexion.

There are few diseases in which the diagnosis is so frequently missed. One case recently brought to my attention had been treated in a sanitarium for melancholia for over a year. Another, on account of the complexion which was mistaken for jaundice, was advised to have the gallbladder removed. Frequently such cases are suspected of having pernicious anemia, and because it is a disease of later life and kidney changes may also be present, of Bright's disease.

It is unfortunate that this is so because so much can be done for these patients by treatment, which consists in feeding them thyroid extract. An entire change in personality may result—the patient loses weight, the hair comes back, the skin clears up, and mental interest in things is reawakened.

"ERMINE."

To treat the sort of cut you describe, press a bleeding area with a piece of absorbent cotton moistened with the peroxide or dilute alcohol. After this, apply a bit of white iodine. It might prove beneficial to then cover the cut with collodion.

"Dear Miss Glad: I'm so delighted with the present condition of my skin that I simply had to write and thank you for helping to make it so smooth and clear. Corneal can indeed be used to improve the condition of the skin. It can be used alone on a moistened and slightly lathered washcloth as a skin cleanser. Or it can be made into a face mask.

To prepare the face mask, one-half cup of the corneal should be combined with enough milk to form a thick, smooth paste that will spread easily.

The skin should be thoroughly cleansed with cleansing cream and then with soap and water before the mask is applied. Then the paste should be spread generously over the face and permitted to dry.

When thoroughly dry remove with tepid water and a soft cloth. Finish with bit of nourishing cream.

Dayton Stivers and Columbus North will mingle at 9:30 p. m. in the feature contest of the initial day's play.

Akron West, undefeated this season, is reported to be the stand-out contender and heir apparent to Portsmouth's title.

Dayton Stivers is a name to conjure with, and the name is one that strikes fear in the hearts of all other high school basketball teams. Orange Crusier quintets have won many more state titles than any other school. Stivers will be aiming at its eighth title in the last twenty-three years.

This Dayton school possessed state championship teams in 1916, 1920, 1921, 1924, 1928, 1929 and 1930.

Now after a lapse of one year, Stivers stands a great chance to regain the pinnacle.

Stivers has a "two-man" team this season. Scoring of points is left to Augie George, tall junior center, and Tom Denney, surviving guard from the "1929" champion team, who is a "dead" shot from any part of the floor. The two forwards and remaining guard seldom make any points, but they play great floor games and are efficient on defense. Many observers think George is, or will be next season, nearly the equal of "Big Bill" Hosket, former all-state Stivers center for three years. Augie is not as good on offense, but is considered superior as a defensive player. Hosket was a trifle lazy on defense.

AMATEUR BASKETBALL TEAMS TO ENTER TOURNEY AT WILBERFORCE

Fifty amateur basketball teams throughout Ohio have been invited to compete in an invitational tournament to be staged on the Wilberforce University floor Friday and Saturday this week.

Tentative acceptances had been received Wednesday from twenty of the invited "simon pure" quintets, according to H. H. Corrothers, assistant director of athletics at Wilberforce.

Wilberforce, who is sponsoring the tourney, the first of its kind ever held at the university or elsewhere in the state, it is said.

Wilberforce University's varsity team will not participate in the competition, the affair being confined to amateur independent teams, both white and colored.

Attractive trophies will be awarded to the tourney winner and the entrant finishing second.

AND WHAT A BARGAIN!

Babe Herman, New Red Gardener, Should At Least Keep Fans Amused

NEW YORK, March 17.—Cincinnati, here's what you got:

Floyd (Babe) Herman, a player they swear by and at Bats left-handed, throws left-handed, thinks left-handed. Stands six feet four. Weighs 190, but walks with such a stoop-shouldered slouch he appears almost anemic. The only man ever to be fired from a ball club while hitting better than .400. That happened when he was first-basing for Atlanta. The opposition couldn't get him out at bat, but his fielding was so atrocious it nullified his punch at the plate.

Is an ex-ports writer, having once been sports editor of the Glendale, Cal., high school paper. Quit the job, he says, "because I was the greatest all-around athlete in school and got tired writing myself up." Loves to chew gum but can't do it. Gets his mouth so tired he can't eat. Chews one of the most impressive wads of tobacco in baseball. Is the only baseball player in history to hit a legitimate three bagger and have it result in a triple play. He is justly proud of this distinction.

Outside of Shanty Hogan, mammoth catcher of the Giants, Herman is probably the worst base runner in baseball. He is such a terrible base runner that many experts argue the best way to get him out is to let him get on base. Some students of the game (Rogers Hornsby is one) rank him as the finest free-swinging in the game. He hits to all fields. He hits any and all sorts of balls. One day he'll miss a certain sort of ball by a country mile, the next day he'll knock the same pitch into Mrs. Sweeney's sun parlor.

When he's "hot," he's probably the greatest player in baseball. At such times he hits at a dazzling clip, makes catches that Speaker would have missed, and throws like a Ruth. But when he's in a batting slump, when the hits are few and far between, he couldn't catch a cold, throws to the wrong bases and—well, he's terrible.

and the baby were at the home of her mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, at Englewood.

The two servants sought were those reported to have left the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Lightfoot, Franklin Park, near New Brunswick, the day after the kidnaping.

A report that the Pinkerton's Detective Agency had been called in to the Lindbergh kidnaping case by Colonel Lindbergh was denied yesterday at the New York office of the Pinkertons.

It was considered possible, however, that the agency, one of those invited to attend the Trenton police conference last week, had been working on the case.

Meanwhile it was learned from Salvatore Spitalo, New York underworld figure appointed almost two weeks ago by Col. Lindbergh as "go-between" that he has about given up hope hearing from the abductors.

"Either they haven't got the baby," Spitalo said early today, "or else they are in a spot where they can't talk. Even our best connection can be damaged with all this heat and there's nobody crazy enough to take a chance of getting this rap."

FARMERS' PROBLEMS IN CROP OPERATION DISCUSSED AT MEET

"Adjusting Crops and Cropping Operations to Meet Changing Economic Conditions" was discussed by Dr. R. D. Lewis of the farm crops department of Ohio State University at a meeting of farmers here, Wednesday afternoon.

Factors considered by Dr. Lewis in making adjustments in cropping operations besides lower prices levels were climatic conditions, physical and productive qualities of the soil, livestock-crop ratio, labor distribution, equipment required and marketability. Crop rotations may be modified to decrease or eliminate the acreage of the more unprofitable crops. This may be done by reducing the acreage or using these crops less frequently in the rotation. It was pointed out that many farm operations may be modified to give lower costs of production, and that many of these require no cash outlay. Among those mentioned were more effective use of manure, increased acreage of legumes to supply protein feeds and improve the soil, timeliness in plowing, planting, cultivation and harvesting and thoroughness in soil preparation and cultivation.

J. A. Silphor of the soils department of Ohio State University, speaking on "Adjusting the Fertilizer Program to Lower Price Levels," recommended that on corn the broadcast applications be omitted, the nitrogen reduced and a moderate amount of 0-14-6 or 2-12-6 be applied to the hill or row on tan colored soils and 20 per cent superphosphate or 0-14-6 on dark colored soils, depending on previous soils treatment.

MORE

In pointing out the effect of the various plant foods on the young corn plant he stated that nitrogen

stimulates top growth, phosphorus causes root development and potassium makes the young plant resistant to root rot diseases. Two per cent nitrogen was the maximum amount recommended in the hill because of the tendency of larger amounts to cause a large top growth and small root system. The ratio of root and top development is determined by the ratio of nitrogen and phosphorus in the soil. If additional nitrogen is needed it is best applied as a side dressing when the corn is from twelve to fifteen inches high. The average increased yield from side dressing with 100 pounds of nitrogenous fertilizer has been six bushels per acre.

At present prices for crops and fertilizers returns on money invested in fertilizer were shown to compare favorably with those of former years. Results of work carried on at Wooster were given showing that from 1910 to 1914 each dollar invested in fertilizer returned $2.12. In 1920 it had declined to $1.53, in 1922 a return of $1.85 was received and at present prices of both crops and fertilizers each dollar invested in fertilizers would return $1.92.

It was recommended that oats receive no fertilizer unless seeded to grass in which case an application of 200 pounds of 0-14-6 or 20 per cent superphosphates should be applied. If the preceding corn crop received a broadcast application or if fertilizers have been applied liberally in previous rotations the quantity may be reduced as the corn crop removes about one third of the fertilizer.

A forum was held in adjusting crops and cropping operations in which many questions were answered by both Messrs. Lewis and Silphor. This meeting was part of the County Agricultural Extension program.

7:10 o'clock. Death was pronounced due to a complication of ailments.

Surviving besides the parents are two brothers, Elmer, of New Carlisle, and Raymond, at home, and a sister Mrs. Anna Snodgrass, Springfield.

Funeral services will be conducted at 1 p. m. Saturday at the residence and again at 2 p. m. at the Mennonite Cemetery there.

MRS. KATHERINE CAMPBELL. Word has been received by relatives here of the death of Mrs. Katherine St. John Campbell which occurred at her home in Albany, Ind., Tuesday morning, the result of burns received a week ago when her clothing caught fire from an open gas stove.

Mrs. Campbell was the daughter of the late Cyrus St. John, a native of Greene County, and had often visited here. She was the last of her immediate family but is survived by a number of grandchildren.

Funeral services were held in DeSoto, Ind., Thursday afternoon and burial took place there.

RUTH LAMBERT. Ruth Lambert, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lambert, E. Main St., died at her parents' home Wednesday night a short time after birth. Besides her parents two brothers Edward Jr., and Paul, survive.

Funeral services will be held at the Need Farm Home, W. Market St., Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock and burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery.

Outside of Shanty Hogan, mammoth catcher of the Giants, Herman is probably the worst base runner in baseball. He is such a terrible base runner that many experts argue the best way to get him out is to let him get on base. Some students of the game (Rogers Hornsby is one) rank him as the finest free-swinging in the game. He hits to all fields. He hits any and all sorts of balls. One day he'll miss a certain sort of ball by a country mile, the next day he'll knock the same pitch into Mrs. Sweeney's sun parlor.

When he's "hot," he's probably the greatest player in baseball. At such times he hits at a dazzling clip, makes catches that Speaker would have missed, and throws like a Ruth. But when he's in a batting slump, when the hits are few and far between, he couldn't catch a cold, throw to the wrong bases and—well, he's terrible.

INVESTIGATION OF KIDNAPING BRINGS DISCOURAGEMENTS

and the baby were at the home of her mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, at Englewood.

The two servants sought were those reported to have left the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Lightfoot, Franklin Park, near New Brunswick, the day after the kidnapping.

A report that the Pinkerton's Detective Agency had been called in to the Lindbergh kidnapping case by Colonel Lindbergh was denied early today at the New York office of the Pinkertons.

It was considered possible, however, that the agency, one of those invited to attend the Trenton police conference last week, had been working on the case.

Meanwhile it was learned from Salvatore Spitalo, New York underworld figure appointed almost two weeks ago by Col. Lindbergh as "go-between" that he has about given up hope hearing from the abductors.

"Either they haven't got the baby," Spitalo said early today, "or else they are in a spot where they can't talk. Even our best connection can be damaged with all this heat and there's nobody crazy enough to take a chance of getting this rap."

FARMERS' PROBLEMS IN CROP OPERATION DISCUSSED AT MEET

"Adjusting Crops and Cropping Operations to Meet Changing Economic Conditions" was discussed by Dr. R. D. Lewis of the farm crops department of Ohio State University at a meeting of farmers here, Wednesday afternoon.

Factors considered by Dr. Lewis in making adjustments in cropping operations besides lower prices levels were climatic conditions, physical and productive qualities of the soil, livestock-crop ratio, labor distribution, equipment required and marketability. Crop rotations may be modified to decrease or eliminate the acreage of the more unprofitable crops. This may be done by reducing the acreage or using these crops less frequently in the rotation.

It was pointed out that many farm operations may be modified to give lower costs of production, and that many of these require no cash outlay. Among those mentioned were more effective use of manure, increased acreage of legumes to supply protein feeds and improve the soil, timeliness in plowing, planting, cultivation and harvesting and thoroughness in soil preparation and cultivation.

J. A. Slipher of the soils department of Ohio State University, speaking on "Adjusting the Fertilizer Program to Lower Price Levels," recommended that on corn the broadcast applications be omitted, the nitrogen reduced and a moderate amount of 0-14-6 or 2-12-6 be applied to the hill or row on tan colored soils and 20 per cent superphosphate or 0-14-6 on dark colored soils, depending on previous soils treatment.

In pointing out the effect of the various plant foods on the young corn plant he stated that nitrogen stimulates top growth, phosphorus causes root development and potassium makes the young plant resistant to root rot diseases. Two per cent nitrogen was the maximum amount recommended in the hill because of the tendency of larger amounts to cause a large top growth and small root system. The ratio of root and top development is determined by the ratio of nitrogen and phosphorus in the soil. If additional nitrogen is needed it is best applied as a side dressing when the corn is from twelve to fifteen inches high. The average increased yield from side dressing with 100 pounds of nitrogenous fertilizer has been six bushels per acre.

At present prices for crops and fertilizers returns on money invested in fertilizer were shown to compare favorably with those of former years. Results of work carried on at Wooster were given showing that from 1910 to 1914 each dollar invested in fertilizer returned $2.12. In 1920 it had declined to $1.53. In 1922 a return of $1.85 was received and at present prices of both crops and fertilizers each dollar invested in fertilizers would return $1.82.

It was recommended that oats receive no fertilizer unless seeded to grass in which case an application of 200 pounds of 0-14-6 or 20 per cent superphosphates should be applied. If the preceding corn and crop received a broadcast application of fertilizer has been applied liberally in previous rotations the quantity may be reduced as the corn crop removes about one third of the fertilizer.

A forum was held in adjusting crops and cropping operations in which many questions were answered by both Messrs. Lewis and Slipher. This meeting was part of the County Agricultural Extension program.

7:10 o'clock. Death was pronounced due to a complication of ailments.

Surviving besides the parents are two brothers, Elmer, of New Carlisle, and Raymond, at home, and a sister Mrs. Anna Snodgrass, Springfield.

Funeral services will be conducted at 1 p. m. Saturday at the residence and again at 2 p. m. at the Mennonite Cemetery there.

MRS. KATHERINE CAMPBELL
Word has been received by relatives here of the death of Mrs. Katherine St. John Campbell which occurred at her home in Albany, Ind., Tuesday morning, the result of burns received a week ago when her clothing caught fire from an open gas stove.

Mrs. Campbell was the daughter of the late Cyrus St. John, a native of Greene County, and had often visited here. She was the last of her immediate family but is survived by a number of grandchildren.

Funeral services were held in DeSoto, Ind., Thursday afternoon and burial took place there.

RUTH LAMBERT
Ruth Lambert, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lambert, E. Main St., died at her parents' home Wednesday night a short time after birth. Besides her parents two brothers Edward Jr. and Paul, survive.

Funeral services will be held at the Need Funeral Home, W. Market St., Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock and burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery.

What Well-Dressed Man Will Wear---If---

Time and Bankroll Important Elements in Program of Dictators of Fashion for Mere Males—But Here They Are for Those With Plenty of Both.

What the well-dressed gent of 1932 will wear morning, noon and night is offered here to give the ladies a laugh and the men a pain in the region of the gizzard. The New York Custom Cutters' Men's Style Show sponsors 'em. Left to right, William C. Norris, in a delectable single-breasted sack suit, Glenurquhart (honest!) plaid; Maurice M. Bennett, in a fetching double-breasted business suit, with striped blue chevot; Frank C. Nagel, in a darling single-breasted director's suit of oxford gray, with striped worsted pants; J. A. Milbourn, in a dream of a director's suit with double-breasted waistcoat and striped chevot trousers; Eugene Schanz, in a fashionable oxford gray cutaway; Samuel E. Larsen, in a petite light blue cassimere host suit for wear instead of a tuxedo when entertaining in the home, and Andrew Aho, in a modestly simple silk-collared dinner suit. Wear 'em all—if you have time.

CHICAGO, Ill. Mar. 14.—The Men's Retail Clothiers' convention has come to an end and if the male population of this country accepts its mandates the well dressed man of 1932 will resemble something between a Tulipa Gesnerina (Tulip to you) and a camouflaged troop ship.

The clothiers have decided that somber dark clothes are merely a reflection of business conditions and that the constant sight of somber drab clothing produces somber drab faces. Now the sight of somber drab faces is one which clothing manufacturers dislike very much so their remedy for the situation is light, brightly colored clothing embellished with gaudy socks and brilliant scarves (ties to you and me).

These Pollyanna like clothes will by their very nature result in smiling faces and when a man is smiling his sales resistance is practically non-existent and a persuasive entrepreneur can sell him anything from a collar button which will not roll under bureaus to a tie which might have been designated by an insane Malay head hunter.

The clothiers say that cream colored suits shall be worn by men this coming year. The more conservative gentleman of taste may wear something fetching in tan or mauve but gone are the Oxford blues and the dull grays.

The Easter Parade this year should be an awe inspiring spectacle if the edict of the convention is carried out. Man, resplendent in orchidaceous hues will strut forth as proudly as the peacock which he will faintly resemble, while his less fortunate mate will have to be satisfied with the comparative drabness of French blue and scarlet.

In the matter of hats the convention was quite arbitrary. Green soft hat will be embellished by tiny red feathers designed no doubt to bring out the elfin spirit of the wearer. It is of course only a step from there to complete equality with the female in matters of head wear and a year hence the more daring of the clothiers anticipate that men's hats will be garnished with waving ostrich feathers or trimmed perhaps with aigrette or osprey plumes.

The arbiters of men's fashion will feel more than a little hurt if lavender ties (scarves if they cost more than a dollar) are not worn to the exclusion of everything else. A cream colored suit, and a green felt hat just scream for a lavender tie, the clothiers say, and any other hue may have the effect of making the suit and the hat just a bit sullen. This must be avoided because as everyone knows a happy hat and a contented suit give the best service.

Men may joyously embrace the lavender tie edict for it will give them a splendid excuse to refuse the conventional wifely gift of Christmas ties, long considered to be one of the most serious hindrances to happy marriages. The red, green and yellow nightgowns which come to married men on birthdays and Christmas have long presented a problem that the great minds of the nation have never been able to solve. Many a business man has hesitated between the difficulty of wearing the tie and amusing his stenographer or refusing to wear it and offending his wife.

Socks of course will have to follow the general trend and the plain black sock may as well fold up its tent and depart for wherever it is sent to have tired socks finally find.

Socks of personality, socks that laugh happily to neighbors, socks that fairly shriek that prosperity is just around the corner, socks that cry aloud that the crisis is only a rumor—they will in the future adorn the legs of mankind. The convention forgot to mention the matter of handkerchiefs but it is assumed that they, to be in perfect taste, will be wispy affairs of silk and that they will be carried in the sleeve.

The silence which has surrounded men's garters was dissipated by the convention and lest one assume that this story is fancy and not fact one need only listen to the exact words of A. C. Carlson, one of the officials of the convention.

"Yes, the Spring clothes will be a bit—eh—radical," he said. "And as for garters, well, we think that pink will be the best color for them."

Pink elephants, pink lizards and pink eyes are all familiar to American business men but pink garters will be something of an innovation. The next step of course will be to bring the garter right out into the open for it seems a pity to hide the glowing pink of an elastic leg ornament under the covering of a trouser leg—even if the trouser leg be cream colored.

Yes sir, it looked like a color spring and if those robins who are even now beginning to stretch their wings in readiness for their annual flight north, take one look at the men's raiment and immediately turn back southward in fright, only the Men's Retail Clothiers' Association can be blamed.

OFFICER OF XENIA COMPANY ENDS LIFE

Climaxing a domestic quarrel, Otto W. Pruss, 53, secretary of the Krippendorf-Dittman Co., shoe manufacturers, shot and killed himself at his home, 259 McCormick Place, in Cincinnati, early Thursday morning.

Relatives told police that before firing the fatal shot, Pruss had an argument with his wife, during which he shot at her once. She left the room and a moment later Pruss pointed the weapon at his head, pulled the trigger and died enroute to the General Hospital. Head offices of the Krippendorf-Dittman Co. are located in Cincinnati, but the company's plant is in Xenia.

TOWN CAN'T CALL CITY HALL ITS OWN

YORKVILLE, O., March 17.—Yorkville isn't sure it can call its new city hall its own. Peter Laskovich owned the land. Believing he might be killed in the World War, he allegedly deeded the property to his sisters, Jean and Agnes. Peter did not go to war. Later he assertedly sold the property to David Garden. Martins Ferry, O. Garden sold it to Yorkville for the city hall.

Mrs. Jean Hileman, New Kensington, Pa., the former Miss Jean Laskovich, has filed a suit claiming ownership of the property and asked cancellation of Garden's deed. The city will fight for its city hall.

"What would taste good for dinner tonight?"

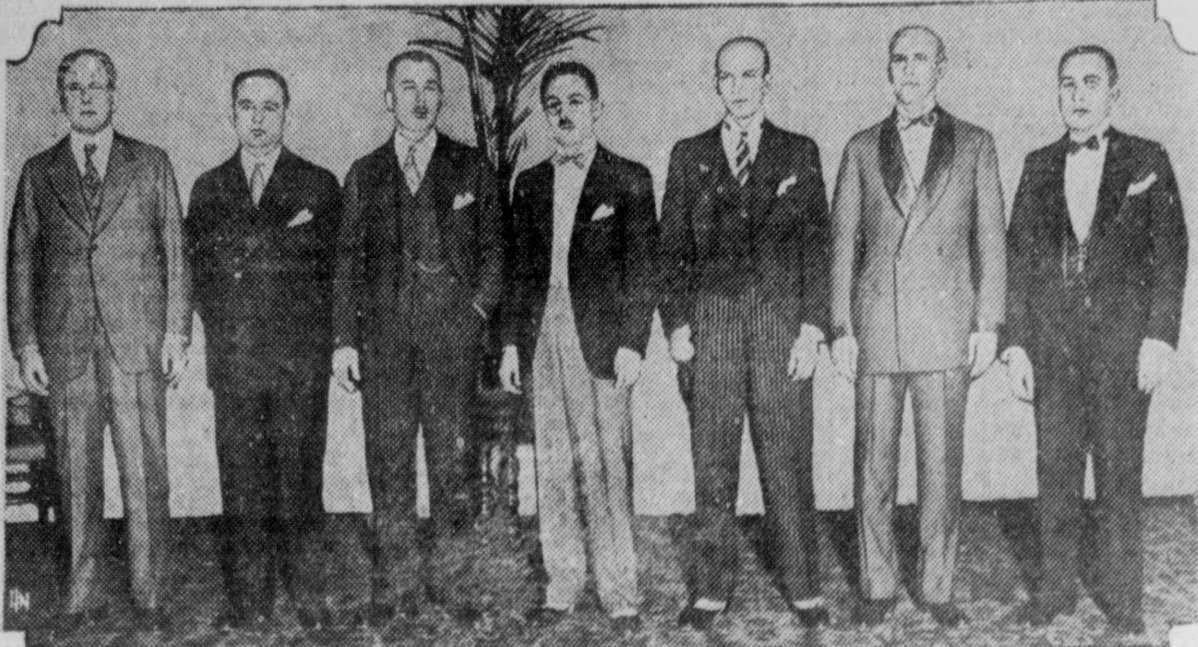

How many wives have asked that question . . . and how many brides of the future will ask it . . . of indifferent husbands, right after breakfast or lunch? Hopefully at first, almost desperately after a time, and finally as part of a dull, daily soliloquy. For every wife discovers that a man with a newly satisfied palate is a total loss as source of inspiration for future meals.

Nevertheless, it's an important and trying matter, this business of planning the menu. There are cook-books, of course, but better than that, why not find out what's new in the markets? Pick up your newspaper—that will tell you. There's news about food—in the advertising of local markets and stores, and in that of the nationally known producer of tempting things to eat.

Here's a new way of buying and serving chicken, for example, and one that's no trouble at all. Or a ham, with a new and piquant flavor. It may be that artichokes have just come to market—the first of the season. Or berries, or fruit, or corn on the cob. The advertisements in your paper tell you these things, with the prices, and where you can buy them. Here is inspiration for many a meal, without dragging weary feet from store to store, looking for what would taste good tonight.

What Well-Dressed Man Will Wear---If---

Time and Bankroll Important Elements in Program of Dictators of Fashion for Mere Males---But Here They Are for Those With Plenty of Both.

What the well-dressed gent of 1932 will wear morning, noon and night is offered here to give the ladies a laugh and the men a pain in the region of the gizzard. The New York Custom Cutters' Men's Style Show sponsors 'em. Left to right, William C. Norris, in a delectable single-breasted sack suit, Glenurquhart (honest!) laid; Maurice M. Bennett, in a fetching double-breasted business suit, of navy blue cheviot; Frank C. Nagel, in a darling single-breasted director's suit of oxford gray, with striped worsted trousers; J. A. Milbourn, in a dream of a director's suit with double-breasted waistcoat and striped cheviot trousers; Eugene Schanz, in a fashionable oxford gray cutaway; Samuel E. Larsen, in petite light blue cassimere host suit for wear instead of a tuxedo when entertaining in the home, and Andrew Aho, in a modestly simple silk-collared dinner suit. Wear 'em all---if you have time.

CHICAGO, Ill. Mar. 14.—The Men's Retail Clothiers' convention has come to an end and if the male population of this country accepts its mandates the well dressed man of 1932 will resemble something between a Tulipa Gesnerina (Tulip to you) and a camouflaged troop ship.

The clothiers have decided that somber dark clothes are merely a reflection of business conditions and that the constant sight of somber dark clothing produces somber dark faces. Now the sight of somber drab faces is one which clothing manufacturers dislike very much so their remedy for the situation is light, brightly colored clothing embellished with gaudy socks and brilliant scarves (ties to you and me).

These Pollyanna like clothes will by their very nature result in smiling faces and when a man is smiling his sales resistance is practically non-existent and a persuasive entrepreneur can sell him anything from a collar button which will not roll under bureau to a tie which might have been designated by an insane Malay head hunter.

The clothiers say that cream colored suits shall be worn by men this coming year. The more conservative gentleman of taste may wear something fetching in tan or mauve but gone are the Oxford blues and the dull grays.

The Easter Parade this year should be an awe inspiring spectacle if the edict of the convention is carried out. Man, resplendent in orchidaceous hues will strut forth as proudly as the peacock which he will faintly resemble, while his less fortunate mate will have to be satisfied with the comparative drabness of French blue and scarlet.

The arbiters of men's fashion will feel more than a little hurt if lavender ties (scarves if they cost more than a dollar) are not worn to the exclusion of everything else. A cream colored suit, and a green felt hat just scream for a lavender tie, the clothiers say, and any other hue may have the effect of making the suit and the hat just a bit sullen. This must be avoided because as everyone knows a happy hat and a contented suit give the best service.

Men may joyously embrace the lavender tie edict for it will give them a splendid excuse to refuse the conventional wifely gift of Christmas ties, long considered to be one of the most serious hindrances to happy marriages. The red, green and yellow nightmares which come to married men on birthdays and Christmas have long presented a problem that the great minds of the nation have never been able to solve. Many a business man has hesitated between the difficulty of wearing the tie and amusing his stenographer or refusing to wear it and offending his wife.

Socks of course will have to follow the general trend and the plain black sock may as well fold up its tent and depart for wherever is the haven tired socks finally find.

Socks of personality, socks that laugh happily to neighbors, socks that fairly shriek that prosperity is just around the corner, socks that cry aloud that the crisis is only a rumor---they will in the future adorn the legs of mankind. The convention forgot to mention the matter of handkerchiefs but it is assumed that they, to be in perfect taste, will be wispy affairs of silk and that they will be carried in the sleeve.

The silence which has surrounded men's garters was dissipated by the convention and lest one assume that this story is fancy and not fact one need only listen to the exact words of A. C. Carlson, one of the officials of the convention.

"Yes, the Spring clothes will be a bit---eh---radical," he said. "And as for garters, well, we think that pink will be the best color for them."

Pink elephants, pink lizards and pink eyes are all familiar to American business men but pink garters

If You Get Up Nights Physic the Bladder With Juniper Oil

Drive out the impurities and excess acids that cause irritation, burning and frequent desire. Juniper oil, buchu leaves, etc., is contained in Bukets, the bladder physic. It works on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c test box from any drug store. After four days if not relieved of "getting up nights" go back and get your money. If you are bothered with backache or leg pains caused from bladder disorders you are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. Sold at Donges Drug Store and W. F. Harper, Jamestown.

will be something of an innovation. The next step of course will be to bring the garter right out into the open for it seems a pity to hide the glowing pink of an elastic leg ornament under the covering of a trouser leg---even if the trouser leg be cream colored.

Yes sir, it looked like a color spring and if those robins who are even now beginning to stretch their wings in readiness for their annual flight north, take one look at the men's raiment and immediately turn back southward in fright, only the Men's Retail Clothiers' Association can be blamed.

"What would taste good for dinner tonight?"

How many wives have asked that question . . . and how many brides of the future will ask it . . . of indifferent husbands, right after breakfast or lunch? Hopefully at first, almost desperately after a time, and finally as part of a dull, daily soliloquy. For every wife discovers that a man with a newly satisfied palate is a total loss as source of inspiration for future meals.

Nevertheless, it's an important and trying matter, this business of planning the menu. There are cook-books, of course, but better than that, why not find out what's new in the markets? Pick up your newspaper---that will tell you. There's news about food---in the advertising of local markets and stores, and in that of the nationally known producer of tempting things to eat.

Here's a new way of buying and serving chicken, for example, and one that's no trouble at all. Or a ham, with a new and piquant flavor. It may be that artichokes have just come to market--- the first of the season. Or berries, or fruit, or corn on the cob. The advertisements in your paper tell you these things, with the prices, and where you can buy them. Here is inspiration for many a meal, without dragging weary feet from store to store, looking for what would taste good tonight.

PIQUA LIGHT PLANT LITIGATION ARGUED BEFORE HIGH COURT

Arguments in six cases, including an appeal involving a $700,000 bond issue for a municipal light plant at Piqua, were heard by the second district court of Appeals at its semi-annual session in Common Pleas Court Wednesday.

Hearing of one local case docketed for consideration was postponed and will be held at Springfield. The matter continued was the foreclosure suit of A. D. Wenrick against Mary Friend and others, in which the plaintiff obtained a judgment in the trial court.

A part of the afternoon session of the court was devoted to hearing counsel arguments in a case in which a group of Piqua taxpayers is appealing from an adverse lower court decision. It marked another step to enjoin the city from issuing and selling $700,000 worth of bonds for a municipally owned light plant, replacing the private utility.

Attorneys for the city petitioned the appeals court to hand down a speedy decision of the case in the hope that jobless men may be put to work on the project as soon as possible, and the contract awarded while the price of building materials is low.

Attorneys for taxpayers seeking to have the bond issue enjoined, argued that the manner of submission of the proposal to a vote of the people was illegal. It was claimed the proposition put before the voters was in reality two separate and distinct propositions, and that some voters discovered it necessary to vote in favor of something they did not want in order to obtain something they desired.

Propositions to purchase the distribution system of the private utility or, as an alternative, to erect an entirely new power plant for the city, were linked together, it was contended.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY BEING OBSERVED IN XENIA

Shamrocks decorated coat lapels Thursday and green was a popular color as Xenians of Irish persuasion paid their annual tribute to Saint Patrick.

Celebration of St. Patrick's Day, the great Ireland anniversary, had a double significance for children of St. Brigid school because Saint Brigid, after whom the local Catholic school is named, was a contemporary of the great St. Patrick.

The day was observed as a holiday by St. Brigid grade and high school pupils. The local observance will culminate Thursday night in the yearly St. Patrick's Day entertainment to be presented by St. Brigid school children in the school auditorium at 8 o'clock. A play will be presented and there will be singing and folk dancing, the keynote being the spiritual and religious life of the great Saint and its effect upon the Irish race.

VETERAN RURAL MAIL CARRIER WILL RETIRE MARCH 31; DISCONTINUE ROUTE

LEAVING behind him a record of twenty-eight years of continuous service, during which length of time he was off duty only four days on account of illness and is estimated to have traveled nearly 260,000 miles, Baldwin Allen, E. Main St., veteran colored rural mail carrier of the Xenia Post Office, will be retired on pension March 31.

Retirement of Allen will result in the immediate discontinuance of his rural route, Number 4, reducing the number of rural routes served by the Xenia office from six to five. Postmaster C. S. Frazer announced.

Allen's route, 35.15 miles in length and serving patrons in the southern part of Greene County, will be consolidated with routes 3 and 6, the mileage being reduced and divided between the two.

Route 3, covered by Andrew J. Love, will be increased from 39.6 to 52.6 miles, and route number 6, on which Lester G. McCoy is the carrier, will be 55.8 miles instead of 40.2.

The five surviving routes will also be renumbered. Routes 1, 2, and 5 will remain the same, except that number 3 will assume a part of the discontinued route 4. Route 6 will henceforth be designated number 4.

Allen is retiring in his 69th year. He became a rural carrier April 15, 1904 and reached the age limit of 65, four years ago. At that time he was eligible to be retired on pension, but requested and obtained two extensions of two years each, the maximum number of extensions prescribed by the postal department. The route he is at present covering is the shortest of the existing routes.

This Woman Lost 64 Pounds of Fat

Mrs. H. Price of Woodside, L. I. writes: "A year ago I weighed 190 lbs. I started to take Kruschen and now I weigh 126 and never felt better in my life and what's more, I look more like 20 yrs. old than the mother of 2 children, one 19 and the other 18. Every one of my friends say it's marvelous the way I reduced."

To lose fat SAFELY and HARMLESSLY, take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—don't miss a morning—a bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle—but don't take chances—be sure it's Kruschen—your health comes first—get it at any drugstore in America. If not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

VETERAN RURAL MAIL CARRIER WILL RETIRE MARCH 31; DISCONTINUE ROUTE

LEAVING behind him a record of twenty-eight years of continuous service, during which length of time he was off duty only four days on account of illness and is estimated to have travelled nearly 250,000 miles, Baldwin Allen, E. Main St., veteran colored rural mail carrier of the Xenia Post Office, will be retired on pension March 31.

Retirement of Allen will result in the immediate discontinuance of his rural route, Number 4, reducing the number of rural routes served by the Xenia office from six to five. Postmaster C. S. Frazer announced.

Allen's route, 35.15 miles in length and serving patrons in the southern part of Greene County, will be consolidated with routes 3 and 6, the mileage being reduced and divided between the two.

Route 3, covered by Andrew J. Love, will be increased from 39.6 to 52.6 miles, and route number 6, on which Lester G. McCoy is the carrier, will be 55.8 miles instead of 40.2.

The five surviving routes will also be renumbered. Routes 1, 2, and 5 will remain the same, except that number 3 will assume a part of the discontinued route 4. Route 6 will henceforth be designated number 4.

Allen is retiring in his 69th year. He became a rural carrier April 15, 1904 and reached the age limit of 65, four years ago. At that time he was eligible to be retired on pension, but requested and obtained two extensions of two years each, the maximum number of extensions prescribed by the postal department. The route he is at present covering is the shortest of the existing routes.

Townsley Chick Chat

Why worry and fret with the old small incubator which is more or less of a fire risk and is a big hardship on whoever has to watch it to see that the temperature stays right, when you can buy 100 properly hatched, carefully selected Thorogood Accredited baby chicks for $10.00 or less?

Get your chicks now when they are worth the most to you in the returns you can get from early broilers and from fall and winter egg production.

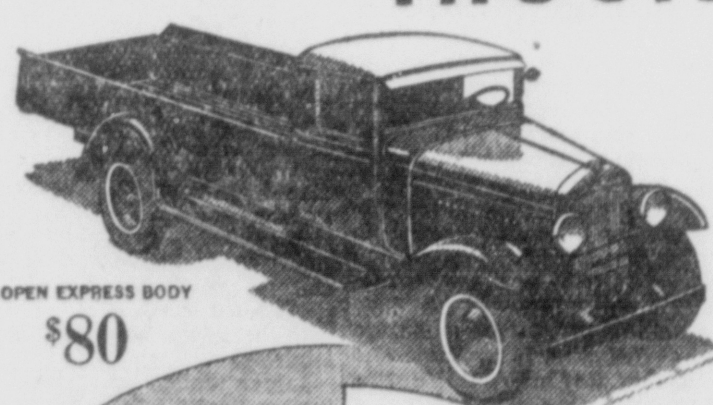

When really good chicks from accurately tested breeding stock costs so little, why waste your time with chicks from unknown breeding, or risk failure by trying to operate your own incubator?

Your neighbors who make money out of poultry are buying Thorogood chicks. Why don't you?

His eyes were not flinching. They were business. Lillian felt he was serious in spite of his sounding to the contrary.

"Of course I would."

"All right, that's a go."

He picked up a heart of celery from its tray of crushed ice and broke it deliberately. Lillian watched while he dipped it into a bit of salt and brought it to his mouth.

"Tell me more about it, though," she said.

"No more—but remember."

It was a strange sort of date, Lillian thought. She never had had one like it before. She didn't know just what to say to this good looking man, who evidently thought she failed to tell things just as they were and that she was passing for something she wasn't.

He said nice things to her, but he did not seem to be especially attracted to her.

STOCKHOLM, Mar.—Being a nobleman has its drawbacks. Bakers and butchers and candlestick makers all seem to take advantage of a baron or count to raise prices skyward, is the complaint of a Swedish nobleman who wants his title changed to plain Herr Johanson. Through his lawyer he has written to the government, asking for an end to his baronial title.

Wanted—Love! The Story of an Unemployed Girl

READ THIS FIRST:

Lillian Abbott, daughter of a wealthy New England family, decides she is tired of the social whirl and wants a career. She decides on the movies and after exchange of correspondence with the head of a movie employment agency, one Thomas Blane, runs away from home and accompanies him to New York from Salem, taking with her her savings. After registering in a New York hotel Blane leaves her, taking with him her money and a diamond ring. She had repulsed his advances. Lillian goes to the hotel grill for dinner, listens to the orchestra and slips out of the room after giving the waiter her room number for him to charge the check. The next morning Lillian reads the account of her disappearance in the papers. The hotel manager calls her to his office and there Lillian confesses she has no money, but she does not tell him her story. The manager, Howard Marsh, agrees to let her stay for two weeks in exchange for her watch, an expensive timepiece. She attempts to find a job as a model that day but is turned down everywhere. "Business is bad," she is told. Back at the hotel Marsh invites her out for dinner.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 17

IN THE TAXI Howard Marsh clicked open a beaten silver cigarette case and held it toward Lillian.

"No thanks—I don't," she stammered, feeling a little hickish because she hadn't acquired the habit.

"Good," he said, taking out one for himself and lighting it.

She liked the line of his profile as he cupped the match with his hands and caused the flame to act as a spot light over his features. "Being different, eh?" he asked when he had settled back in the cab and taken a puff from his cigarette.

"Am I?"

"Not—not really. But you are awfully nice—and charming."

Minstrel Man Dies— Sees Last Curtain Rise

Charley Gano died at his home in Marion, Ohio, Monday as revealed in a brief and obscure item in the news columns. But to minstrel fans in Xenia the brief dispatch was worthy of much greater attention.

For years the annual visits of Charley Gano to Xenia caused a ripple of excitement among theater-going folk back in the days of the glory of the Opera House. Every year, as a member of some minstrel troupe, he trod the boards here, his pudgy figure grotesquely costumed his face in shiny black face, the brightest quips of the era rolling off his lips in that drawl he affected.

Most frequently his appearances here were with Coburn's Minstrels, usually when that troupe was "trying it out on the dog," but he never persuaded Bradford to enroll in that school where he acquitted himself with distinction. Graduating from the medical college at Cincinnati, Bill took the government job in Dayton where he is one of the distinguished younger members of the staff. Bill says he never reads brother Roark's stories because he doesn't understand them. Which proves something or other about a prophet in his home town, etc.

He blamed the actor for reduction of income from $17,500 annually to $1,000. Two other brothers testified for the defense.

HOW TO MAKE TAX RETURN UNDER NEW LAW

Based upon questions with which taxing authorities are daily besieged, indicating the difficulties that are being commonly encountered by taxpayers, a summary of routine procedure under the new Ohio Tax System was prepared today by the State Tax Commission as a guide to taxpayers during the remainder of the tax listing period. The first installment of the summary follows:

Q. Where can I get help in making out my return?

A. Go to your county auditor. The county auditors, as a rule have organized and prepared their staffs to give personal assistance to taxpayers in making out their returns. It is the earnest advice of taxing authorities throughout the state that the taxpayers who wish to avail themselves of this assistance, do so immediately. The auditors and their clerks have more time to give each taxpayer now than will be possible in the later rush. It is to the advantage of the taxpayer to make his returns early.

Q. Where shall I make my return?

A. All returns, except by inter-county corporations and dealers in intangibles, must be made to the county auditor, not to the State Tax Commission. Those in excess of $5,000 will be transmitted to the Commission by the auditor.

Q. When must I make my return?

A. March 31st is the last day for listing, otherwise a penalty of 50 per cent must be added. Extensions of time beyond that date can be made by the county auditor only upon application by the individual taxpayer and then only for good cause and for a period of sixty days.

Q. What property is to be listed at this time?

A. All taxable property except real estate. The individual must return his stocks and bonds of Ohio and foreign corporations; notes, mortgages, trust funds, annuities, land trust certificates; money on hand, in safety deposit box, or if deposited outside the state; Ohio state, municipal, county, township or school bonds issued since January 1, 1913; state, municipal, county, township or school bonds issued outside of Ohio; withdrawable stock in financial institutions outside the state and other interest bearing obligations from which he derives an income. These comprise schedule No. 1 of the intangible tax return. Unproductive investments must be listed under Schedule No. 2. If engaged in business, the individual must list his credits, which are comprised of his accounts receivable within the year, less his accounts payable within the year.

Q. What personal property must be listed?

A. All personal property used in business. Manufacturers must list tools, machinery and equipment, inventory of raw and finished products and goods in process. Professional men must list furniture and fixtures, books, instruments and supplies used in the profession; merchants their fixtures and inventories; and farmers, their tools, machinery and farm products. Domestic animals must be listed. Household goods in hotels and furnished apartments, and, so far as used for lodging, in rooming houses, tourist camps, or homes where roomers are kept, also must be listed. Watercraft used in Ohio waters, and aircraft not used wholly in business in another state, must be listed where the owner resides, not where located.

Q. What property need not be listed?

A. Real estate is listed by the auditor on a separate duplicate at a later date and is not to be included in the present return. The individual does not need to list household goods in private homes, automobiles; bank or building and loan non-withdrawable stock; deposits in Ohio banks or building and loan; United States bonds; joint stock land bank bonds or stock; royalties from patents or copyrights; stock of corporations dealing in intangibles; stock of domestic insurance companies; World War adjusted compensation bonds; or Ohio state, municipal, county, township or school bonds issued prior to January 1, 1913. Taxable property converted into non-taxables during the preceding year, however, must be listed for the fractional part of the year when held in taxable form.

Q. How may I file my return?

A. Returns may be made by mail, or in person, in either case to the county auditor. If by mail, a self-addressed envelope should be enclosed for return of the auditor's certificate or treasurer's receipt.

Q. What rates do I pay?

A. Tangible personal property used in business is taxed at the local real estate rates, on fixed percentage of its value according to use, as shown by the blank form. The local rates, by taxing districts, are shown on the form for each county. There is a flat rate fixed by the law for each class of intangible property. These are stated on page 6 of the form, in the Classified Tax List table.

Q. How do I make out my return?

A. Read the instructions on page 2 of the blank form for returns, and carefully note those which pertain to your case. Then begin with the first question on page 1, and follow through. Under each heading list only the taxable property called for by that particular heading. Where there is none, the word "None" should be written. Each question must be answered. The form, though extensive, is not difficult if followed through.

Q. How are taxes computed?

A. The taxpayer may compute his own taxes, and necessarily will do so if payment is made by mail. The tables and instructions on page 6 of the blank form, under the heading of Recapitulation and Computation of Tax, make this a simple matter. There is one table, headed General Tax List, for tangible personal property, and another, headed Classified Tax List, for intangible property. The local tax rates to be applied to tangible personal property, will be found at the bottom of page 4. The rates for the various classes of intangible property are stated in the column to the right of the Classified Tax List table.

Q. When do I pay my taxes?

A. Real estate taxes are to be paid as heretofore. Half of the estimated total tax on tangible and intangible personal property for 1932 is now to be paid in advance; the remainder by September 20. It cannot be allowed to become delinquent, as the return is not deemed filed until the advance payment is made, and the 50 per cent penalty must be added if the return is not filed in time.

Q. How is payment to be made?

A. The advance payment may be made with the return. Otherwise, the auditor will certify the amount to the taxpayer, for payment to the treasurer. In this case, ten days after March 31 is the time limit for making the advance payment. In either case, checks for payment of taxes must be payable to the county treasurer.

YOUTH SENTENCED
Pleading guilty to a disorderly conduct charge, George Connors, 19, colored, 28 Park St., was fined $25 and costs and sent to jail in default of payment by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Thursday morning. Police made the arrest Wednesday.

LOW PRICED but KELVINATOR QUALITY all the way through

MANY people have the impression that Kelvinator builds only the larger, more expensive electric refrigerators. But such is not the case. It is true, of course, that Kelvinator's reputation as "the finest electric refrigerator built" is the result of 18 years of building only quality merchandise. But this well-known Kelvinator quality is not confined to any one model. If it is a Kelvinator, regardless of whether it is the high, low or medium-priced model, it has Kelvinator quality, craftsmanship and value all the way through.

The new, low-priced "K" Model is a splendid example. In it, you will find a type of electric refrigeration that is so completely satisfactory you will wonder how anyone could ask for more. The illustration above gives you some idea of the exceptional beauty of this model. But more important even than beauty, is the completeness of its features and the fineness of its construction, in every detail.

The new "K" Model is now being displayed. Any Kelvinator representative will be glad to show it to you—glad to explain its many features—and to tell you why it will give you many years of economical, trouble-free, satisfactory performance.

For a small down payment and on long, easy terms, you can now enjoy Kelvinator Electric Refrigeration at a price you will be glad to pay. See it to-day at our showroom.

Grocers, florists, meat merchants, druggists, factory executives and all other users of commercial electric refrigeration equipment are invited to use the services of the Kelvinator Refrigeration Engineer. Without obligation, he will analyze your refrigeration problems and show you how you can save money by installing the time-tested and proved Kelvinator equipment. Call to-day and ask for the K. R. Under each heading list only the taxable property called for by that particular heading. Where there is none, the word "None" should be written. Each question must be answered. The form, though extensive, is not difficult if followed through.

Q. How are taxes computed?

A. The taxpayer may compute his own taxes, and necessarily will do so if payment is made by mail. The tables and instructions on page 6 of the blank form, under the heading of Recapitulation and Computation of Tax, make this a simple matter. There is one table, headed General Tax List, for tangible personal property, and another, headed Classified Tax List, for intangible property. The local tax rates to be applied to tangible personal property, will be found at the bottom of page 4. The rates for the various classes of intangible property are stated in the column to the right of the Classified Tax List table.

Q. When do I pay my taxes?

A. Real estate taxes are to be paid as heretofore. Half of the estimated total tax on tangible and intangible personal property for 1932 is now to be paid in advance; the remainder by September 20. It cannot be allowed to become delinquent, as the return is not deemed filed until the advance payment is made, and the 50 per cent penalty must be added if the return is not filed in time.

Q. How is payment to be made?

A. The advance payment may be made with the return. Otherwise, the auditor will certify the amount to the taxpayer, for payment to the treasurer. In this case ten days after March 31 is the time limit for making the advance payment. In either case, checks for payment of taxes must be payable to the county treasurer.

KELVINATOR QUALITY all the way through

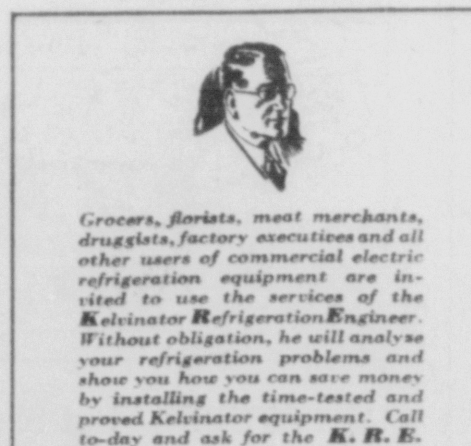

MANY people have the impression that Kelvinator builds only the larger, more expensive electric refrigerators. But such is not the case. It is true, of course, that Kelvinator's reputation as "the finest electric refrigerator built" is the result of 18 years of building only quality merchandise. But this well-known Kelvinator quality is not confined to any one model. If it is a Kelvinator, regardless of whether it is the high, low or medium-priced model, it has Kelvinator quality, craftsmanship and value all the way through.

The new, low-priced "K" Model is a splendid example. In it, you will find a type of electric refrigeration that is so completely satisfactory you will wonder how anyone could ask for more. The illustration above gives you some idea of the exceptional beauty of this model. But more important even than beauty, is the completeness of its features and the fineness of its construction, in every detail.

The new "K" Model is now being displayed. Any Kelvinator representative will be glad to show it to you—glad to explain its many features—and to tell you why it will give you many years of economical, trouble-free, satisfactory performance.

For a small down payment and on long, easy terms, you can now enjoy Kelvinator Electric Refrigeration at a price you will be glad to pay. See it to-day at our showroom.
